FOUR AGES OF MAN-IN RISKS FALL IN RATE FOR BOYS OVER 10

PEOPLE LIVING LONGER:
FEWER BABIES

The highest number of marriages since the war... the lowest birth-rate on record... divorce soaring to a new level... the population still increasing. Men and women snatching another two and a half years from life.

Sufficient material for half a dozen H. G. Wells' sociological works lies in the Registrar-General's review of 1933, published recently, a "statistical review" revealing all the wonderful and tragic happenings in the lives of the forty millions of people in England and Wales.

Births, marriages and deaths, plucked from the cold official columns of figures in the medical and civil tables, take on a new significance.

In 1933 our birth-rate fell to 14.4 per 1,000. Only Austria and Sweden have a lower rate. Marriages totalled 318,191, or 11,000 more than in 1932—a record except for the years 1916 and 1919-21 when special conditions prevailed.

There were more divorces than ever—the 1928 record was eclipsed. But the number of those who gave marriage "another chance" also rose.

WIDOWERS LIKE TO RE-MARRY

Here are some other facts about marriage:

At all ages widowers get married in greater proportion than bachelors. Widows, on the other hand, do not enjoy any ascendancy over spinster rivals until after the age of 35, when they go to the altar in greater numbers.

The first quarter of the year, January-March, is the most unpopular. In the first quarter of 1933 there were, proportionately, fewer weddings than in any year since 1837.

The third quarter—July to September—has, since the beginning of the century, been the favourite period for weddings. Four times as many were celebrated then.

Despite child-bearing risks, married women have a greater chance of survival than the unmarried. At every age up to 50 the risk of dying has been growing less for wives than for spinsters for the past 20 years.

AVERAGE AGE TWO YEARS HIGHER

In the 12 years between 1921 and 1933 English men and women added 2.3 and 2.7 years to their average ages respectively. In the year under review the average age for males was 32.3 and for females 33.0. It is still gradually increasing.

The Four Ages of Man might be the title for the chapter devoted to fatal motor accidents. Summarised, they are:

Age Five to Ten, the age of greatest risk "commencing pedestrian activity uncontrolled by experience".

Age Ten to Fifteen, in which the boys have grown more cautious and reduced the death risk from 132 to 105 per million.

Age Twenty to Twenty-five—"the age of great motor-driving activity not fully restrained by a sense of responsibility." Here the risk has increased from 365 to 393 per million.

Old Age—"With its physical inability to escape traffic dangers."

Curiously enough, the risk of death for women from motor accidents remained unchanged between 1931-33 compared with the previous three years.

There are still nearly a million and three-quarters "surplus" women. An estimated total population of 40,350,000 comprises 19,357,000 males and 20,993,000 females. Since 1931 (the last census), the population increased by 398,000, or 1 per cent.

ROUND THE WORLD AIR PLANS

THREE DAYS INSTEAD OF
TWENTY-ONE

New York, Jan. 15.

With plans agreed upon for establishing the Transatlantic link between Imperial Airways and Pan-American Airways, attention has been turned to completing an air mail service girdling the globe.

The Pan-American company will extend its operations from Honolulu, Hawaii to Auckland, New Zealand, and connect there with a proposed extension of Imperial Airways from Australia.

Already agreements for landing facilities have been signed with the authorities at Kingman Reef, 1,000 miles from Honolulu, and Pago Pago, 1,450 miles further on from there.

The entire flight would be completed in three days, as compared with the best steamship time of between 18 and 21 days.

Success of the project will depend upon the volume of mail from New Zealand and Australia.

Detective Stories

Hue, Indo-China, Jan. 5.

A SALUTE of seven guns at 5.15 a.m. to-day proclaimed the birth of a Crown Prince to the Emperor and Empress of Annam.

This is the first child-born to the royal parents, who were married at Hue in 1934.—Reuter.

Annam is a tiny western Eastern State of Indo-China, with a French protectorate. The Emperor Bao-Dai, the "Son of Heaven," is twenty-three.

He has a harem of 200, but also a jazz band. It was formed under the advice of Jack Hylton, who was made honorary musical director of the Court in 1932.

The hand plays "A Bungalow, a Piccolo and You," "Song of the Bell," and "Auf Wiedersehen."

Bao-Dai has a library of detective stories and a wardrobe of Bond-street suits. On state occasions he surrounds his palace with elephants and sacrifices a bullock, a goat, and a pig in the presence of the mandarins.

Architectural and ceramic evidence led to the belief that the sixth Troy was probably destroyed by an earthquake not long after 1300 B.C., Dr. Blegen said.

"We concluded that the early seventh Troy, which immediately succeeded and was constructed to a great extent of fallen material from the buildings of the sixth settlement, maintained its existence for approximately a century until it was destroyed, doubtless in a great fire, in the early years of the 12th century, B.C., and that it in turn was followed at once by a later seventh settlement."

He said this theory was provisional pending further excavation and study.

The new theory is said to conform closely with the traditional date of the capture of Troy, 1183 B.C., and with the Homer version, since one of his characters prophesied the return of Aeneas following this flight from Troy, and a subsequent period of rule by Aeneas and his descendants.—United Press.

The finding of the court was that he had used the words only in a "Pickwickian" or parade-ground sense in a moment of justifiable indignation.—United Press.

An attempt to curtail the immemorial prerogative of sergeant-major in the matter of strong language has come to an end with the acquittal of a warrant officer of the Austrian Dragoons.

The sergeant-major was charged with casting reflections on the honour of his men by calling them "a gang of thieves and a pack of rogues." He was provoked by the disappearance of a new pair of riding breeches, which he suspected had been taken by one of his troopers.

NATIONAL DEFENCE: THE WHOLE TRUTH

WHAT THE COUNTRY IS NOT TOLD

INSIDE STORY OF THE PEACE CRISIS

London, Jan. 16.

THE Morning Post to-day placed before its readers a full review of Britain's position in the present international situation.

The facts are grave and unpalatable, but they have been collected from unimpeachable sources. It should be emphasised that everything now to be put before the public is already well known to our possible enemies. Only the British public remains ignorant of the real state of affairs, and sound judgment of policy cannot be founded on ignorance of the facts.

IN THE NATIONAL INTEREST

While the disclosures may be considered distasteful and startling, they justify neither panic nor pessimism. Indeed, it will be obvious that it is in the national interest that the facts should be properly appreciated and calmly considered—while there is still time for the necessary action—rather than that the country should drift unknowingly into real danger.

Serious attention is directed to the general review of the whole problem which appears below, and to the further and more detailed articles which will appear to-morrow and in subsequent issues.

ABYSSINIA—AND AFTER

"I have seldom spoken with greater regret, for my lips are not yet unsealed. Were these troubles over I would make a case, and I guarantee that not a man would go into the lobby against us."
—MR. BALDWIN, in the House of Commons on December 10, 1935.

Twenty-four hours before Mr. Baldwin made this pronouncement in the House of Commons, the Cabinet had endorsed the ill-fated Hoare-Laval peace terms.

Following are the principal reasons that inspired them to do so. They constitute the "case"—referred to by Mr. Baldwin—which, if it had been known at the time, would have given pause to even those who disliked the terms in themselves and were most eager to criticise the Cabinet for endorsing Sir Samuel Hoare's action in putting the terms forward.

The Immediate Danger

Great Britain was—and still is—faced with an international situation of great gravity. That is the considered opinion of those in the best position to judge.

Potential developments in the Abyssinian war constitute the immediate danger, not so much in themselves, but because of their probable sequel.

At no time have the Government doubted the ability of our defence forces to deal with any situation that might arise immediately out of League of Nations action in connection with the Abyssinian conflict; although it has been realised for some time that the brunt of any such action would fall on Great Britain.

But such is the deplorable condition of our defences to-day, and so certain is it that other members of the League would be unwilling or unable to provide effective help, that even the losses such action would inevitably entail—relatively small as they might well be—would leave this country perilously weakened.

It would take her time to repair her losses and to increase her strength; and during that time she would be at the most serious disadvantage should any aggressive Great Power select the moment to make demands, territorial or economic.

We Have Most to Lose

The British Empire has more to lose than any other member of the League, and more to defend. Events of the past few months have made it clear to the Government that, in certain eventualities, this country will be expected to take far greater risks than any other League member. The Government also know that if the policy which many people—with the highest motives—vigorously advocate to-day is pushed to its logical extreme, the Empire will be placed in a position of acute danger which the public as a whole does not as yet appreciate.

Many of those who believe in collective security through the League agree with those who do not so believe that our defences are inadequate. But, the Government know the full truth, which is that our defence forces are quite inadequate, even to meet our League obligations. In fact, it is argued by many competent authorities that membership of the League—with the far-reaching obligations entailed, demands even stronger defences than a policy of isolation or alliances.

Electoral Mandate

These considerations prompted the Government to ask for a mandate at the General Election to increase our defences. But it was realised that it would take time to carry this mandate into effect. Therefore, as the Abyssinian war still continued in spite of League action, and in view of the obvious dangers entailed in applying further sanctions, the Government knew that it was urgent for the future peace of Europe that the conflict should be settled as soon as possible.

That is why the Government originally endorsed the Hoare-Laval peace terms, however much all concerned may have disliked the terms in themselves.

As Sir Samuel Hoare said in his speech in the House of Commons on December 19:

"Neither M. Laval nor I liked many features of them (the peace proposals). But that basis did seem to us to be the only basis upon which it was even remotely likely that we could at least start a peace discussion. So far as I myself was concerned it seemed to me to be so important to start a negotiation, even if it had to be on this basis, that much as I disliked some features of the scheme, I could not withhold my provisional assent. I felt that the issues were so grave and the dangers of the continuance of the war were so serious that it was worth making an attempt, and that it was essential to maintain Anglo-French solidarity. It was in this spirit and this spirit alone that we agreed to the suggestions. That alone is the explanation and justification of the Paris communique."

France Will Not March

In addition, three further considerations make the position more serious:

The first is, that it has become increasingly clear that France will never fight except in face of a threat of invasion of any of her own territories. The armies of France will not march for the League of Nations unless France is directly concerned. France, too, has been seriously embarrassed by the effect of her policy at Geneva on her relations with Italy, whom she regards as an indispensable ally.

The second is that Germany, with whom Great Britain had hoped to make further pacts and arrangements, has made it clear that she will do nothing at the moment—partly, because she wishes to wait and see who comes heat out of the present crisis, and partly because she believes that Britain's defences are so weak, and will take so long to repair, that she need be in no hurry to enter into any pacts with her.

The third is that, while Italy became increasingly truculent, other members of the League did not become proportionately more helpful. Just as France was becoming more and more reluctant to be involved, other nations were making it clear that the prospect of effective collective support was an illusion. Moreover, with the progress of the Abyssinian war, China, Japan and Egypt began to show signs of trouble.

Thus the British Government found themselves without the essentials either for a full-blooded peace or a full-blooded

They Said—

Only three of our capital ships to-day are post-war. The design of the remainder dates from the days before aircraft attack had to be taken into account, and many of our cruisers are obsolete as regards modern requirements. Mr. Baldwin, in his Broadcast speech on October 25, 1935.

Throughout all these difficult and anxious weeks it has been made abundantly clear to us that we have been gravely handicapped by the fact—the knowledge of which is widespread upon the Continent—that our defensive forces have fallen to a dangerously low level. Mr. N. Chamberlain, at Kelso, September 21, 1935.

The worship of force in many parts of the world compels us, in the interests of world peace, to look to our own defences. Sir Samuel Hoare, Hansard, October 22, 1935.

Unless this great country of ours possessed a Navy that is supreme—and if it is materially equal, it will be supreme—we shall, I believe, lose this great Empire of ours, and we will not be able to fulfil the great obligations we have undertaken all over the world. Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger Keyes, Authors' Club dinner, December 2, 1935.

A fleet of British ships of war are the best negotiators in Europe. They always speak to be understood, and generally gain their point. Their arguments carry conviction to the breasts of our enemies. Nelson to Lady Hamilton in a letter written from the St. George, March 13, 14, and 16, 1801.

policy, and it became all the more imperative to obtain peace outside the League.

"Not a Ship, Not a Man"

Sir Samuel Hoare obviously had these considerations in mind when, in the speech referred to, he stated:

"We alone have taken these military precautions. There is no British Fleet in the Mediterranean, there are the British reinforcements in Egypt, in Malta and Aden. Not a ship, not a machine, not a man has been moved by any other member State. Now that negotiations have failed, we must have some thing more than these general protestations of loyalty to the League. I say that again, not because we, the British Empire, are afraid of an Italian attack upon us, but because without this active co-operation collective security is impossible, and the League will dissolve. I say it further, because I believe that without this active co-operation it will be impossible to have more than an unsatisfactory peace. You cannot have a 100 per cent. peace if you have only got 5 per cent. co-operation that goes to the making of it."

"It is a choice between the full co-operation of all the member States and the kind of unsatisfactory compromise that was contemplated in the suggestions which Mr. Laval and I put up."

To-day Great Britain stands almost alone, with no friends on whom she can count, and with little possibility of making any. A year ago she could have counted on the support of France and Italy in any threat to the peace of Europe.

To-day, owing to the weakness of her armed forces, her policy at Geneva—though inspired by the highest motives—has, while failing to stop or to end the war, antagonised Italy and confused Anglo-French relations.

Alienating Allies

If this policy is pushed to extremes, the support of France will be jeopardised, and Italy will become an open and active antagonist. Whatever the outcome and the possibility is that Italy would collapse into chaos or Communism—the future support of a powerful ally with two million bayonets would be lost beyond recall. The latter event, indeed, is now almost inevitable, even if an embarrassing and expensive war in the Mediterranean is avoided.

Unless, therefore, immediate steps are taken to put Britain's defences in order, she will be placed in the weakest possible position to refuse the demands which aggressive Powers are likely to make in the future.

All this was realised only too clearly by the Government, and they hoped that, if the Hoare-Laval Peace Terms resulted in the settlement of the Abyssinian war, a source of future trouble would be stopped and they would have time to carry out their defence plans.

But when the nature of these terms became known, there was a

GLARING DEFECTS OF BRITAIN'S DEFENCE

FACTS ABOUT THE FLEET: SHORTAGE OF SHELLS

The following summary shows the position in which Great Britain has been placed by the neglect of her defences in recent years.

In succeeding issues of the Morning Post the defects epitomised below will be subjected to detailed examination.

NAVY

1. Since the Great War stocks of ammunition have been allowed to fall far below the usual reserve. As a result, when the Fleet went to the Mediterranean, there was barely enough ammunition available.
2. Arrangements for rapid expansion of manufacture of war material by private firms have not been made, and State arsenals are incapable of meeting our full needs.
3. Naval personnel is seriously inadequate, and it will take some years properly to train the additional personnel required. The present shortage is imposing an unfair strain on the existing personnel.
4. We have not sufficient force to safeguard our food supply in the event of war with a Great Power possessing a large and efficient force of submarines or commerce raiders. Both Germany and Italy have large forces of efficient submarines and other craft suitable for attacking trade routes.
5. Our cruiser and destroyer strength is far below what is necessary. Our battleships are mainly obsolete or obsolescent.
6. Certain technical considerations are liable to entail a dangerous delay in the building of the new ships which are so urgently needed.
7. Our oil supply, in the event of war, would be in jeopardy.

ARMY

1. To-day the Regular and Territorial armies and reserves, total 451,453 as compared with 697,110 in 1913—a reduction of 245,656.
2. Apart from the Army reserve, which would be absorbed on mobilisation in bringing the Regular Army to war strength, the only reserve for the Regular Army is the Territorial Army. Since the War, even the Militia, which was the reserve for the Regular Army, has been abolished.
3. The reserves of stores and equipment are lower than they sudden and perhaps unprecedented wave of hysterical propaganda against them. For a time a large section of the public, led by most of the Press (even those organs that had previously given blind support to the Government) and by the League of Nations Union, threw aside restraint and—united in an emotional storm of disapproval. Practical considerations were ignored; even the terms themselves were stifled at birth without calm consideration. Few stopped to consider that the Government might have excellent reasons, unknown to the public, for endorsing Sir Samuel Hoare's action in putting these terms forward.

Behind the Scenes

In this wave of excited feeling, Mr. Baldwin's famous remark, which is quoted at the head of this article, was momentarily forgotten. Frantic political manoeuvres went on behind the scenes. Sir Samuel Hoare, owing to an accident, was delayed in his return to England, which gave his opponents a clear start. As a result, it soon became clear to the Government that they were in serious danger of defeat.

Perhaps the Government made a mistake in not taking the public more into their confidence, in which case, no doubt, much of the criticism would have been withdrawn. But, whatever the reasons that prompted the Prime Minister to keep his lips sealed, it is clear that it would not have been in the national interest to risk a defeat at a time of such crisis.

It is equally clear that criticism of any errors in the past is quite unprofitable. The first essential is to correct the widespread public misunderstanding that deflected the Government from their course of action and has resulted only in the most dangerous delay.

The second is to give the Government the fullest support in any defence measures they may take. The summary which appears in this column gives an indication of the deficiencies that have to be made good before Britain once again can take an effective part in securing the peace of the world. These deficiencies will be dealt with in detail in succeeding articles in the Morning Post.

Taken in conjunction with the facts stated above, they reveal for the first time the inner history of one of the most critical episodes in recent times.

4. All the standard tanks are out and obsolete.
5. Special tanks to co-operate with infantry are not yet available, nor are anti-tank guns which are needed for both local and "area" defence.
6. Cavalry and infantry are using out-of-date and unreliable automatics, judged by modern standards.
7. Under the new scheme, the Army lacks a considerable number of machine-guns.
8. With the increasing mechanisation of the Army, it is more dependent than ever before on imported oil. (See Naval position.)
9. There is a very serious deficiency of modern anti-aircraft guns.
10. The Regular Army is deficient in anti-aircraft units.
11. There is little or no provision for the anti-aircraft defence of anywhere in the country except Greater London.
12. The Territorial Army, which is solely responsible for Home anti-aircraft defence (ground troops), is seriously under strength. It also lacks the latest scientific equipment.

AIR FORCE

1. Our strength has been allowed to fall far below danger point. At present rates of expansion, Germany will have 2,600 first-line aeroplanes by March, 1937, while Great Britain, with heavy overseas commitments, will have at most 2,400 machines, of which only 1,500 will be available for home defence.
2. The Fleet Air Arm is inadequate.
3. Other countries have already arranged greater expansion facilities than this country.
4. The number of strategic aerodromes in the Empire is inadequate owing to the small scale of our subsidised commercial flying.
5. Our heavy bombers are insufficient in numbers relative to other types.
6. Our provision for stimulating and maintaining technical development is inadequate.

Grave of British Hero In Ethiopia

Adigrat, Jan. 26.
The grave of a British hero who died during the Napier campaign in Ethiopia is being tended near here to-day by the Italian Army.

It is the final resting place of Colonel A. R. Dunn, who had been awarded the Victoria Cross for valour on the field of battle. Around him are buried five Italian soldiers and three Italian officers but this humble graveyard in the shadows of the mishapen Amba Matara mountain peak is called the "English Cemetery."

Only twenty yards from the dusty road that joins Adigrat and Senafe, the tomb-stones are constantly being discoloured by the red powder that is swirled up by passing trucks and marching soldiers on route to the Makalo Dolo front, but every morning a soldier of the Italian Engineering Corps brushes the dust from off the crosses and stones.

Flowers On Grave

When I arrived there in the afternoon, writes a United Press correspondent, some red mountain flowers had just been placed on Colonel Dunn's grave. They may have been put there by some English correspondent who had passed by, but it is more probable that this act of memory was performed by an Italian soldier as the cemetery is now hidden from view by great piles of supplies, a wooden store-house and a hospital tent.

The inscription on the marble slab that is sunk into the mound of the middle grave reads: "In Memory of A. R. Dunn, V.C., Col. 33rd R. who died at Senafe on January 25, 1898." This stone I was told, was erected by men of an Askari column under command of Italian officers in 1916. The stone wall around the cemetery was put up by the Italians in 1927. The same year an iron cross was also placed there.

Colonel Dunn, who died at Senafe of illness, was a member of the Famous 33rd Regiment which stormed Magdala in April, 1898. The regiment was marching into the village when a single shot was heard. It was the Emperor, Theodore of the Ethiopians, who had just blown out his brains with a silver mounted pistol which had been given him by Queen Victoria.

SEPARATIST PLAN FINAL BREAK WITH NANKING

Peiping, Feb. 6. The east Hopen and northern Chian problems are expected to be settled between the Chinese and Japanese in about two months, according to a statement issued by a responsible Chinese leader here.

The Chinese representatives will adhere to the demand for the abolition of the East Hopen Anti-Communist Autonomous Government under Yin Yu-keng. Secondly, the Chinese demand the withdrawal of General Li Shou-chen's troops from six districts in northern Chian.

Shih Yu-shan's Plan

Chinese newspapers give much prominence to the reported secret meeting between Major-General Dohara and General Shih Yu-shan. The latter is the notorious pro-Manchukuo soldier and one time Governor of Anhwei. Rumours are current that General Shih Yu-shan is planning an uprising in North China with the assistance of Liu Kwei-tang and Pei Chien-wu, two pro-Manchukuo commanders.

East Hopen's "Freedom"

Shanghai, Feb. 6. The East Hopen Autonomous Committee under Yin Yu-keng has completely severed itself from the Hopen Provincial Government, and thus the 4,000,000 inhabitants of the demilitarized zone in North China have been completely freed from the Nanking regime, states a cable from Tientsin.

The current monthly income of the East Hopen committee is estimated at $250,000 from the salt tax surplus and $100,000 from the Peiping-Mukden Railway Administration. "The financial status of the new administration is therefore, quite sound."

Before the inauguration of this regime, the tax yield of the demilitarized zone totalled $12,000,000 a year, of which $8,000,000 was transmitted to the Hopen Provincial Government, leaving $4,000,000 for local spending.

In the future, taxes paid by residents of the demilitarized zone to the East Hopen Autonomous Committee will be retained by the committee and spent on the area under its own jurisdiction. This decision, presuming that the previous scale of taxation is maintained, will mean an $8,000,000 surplus in East Hopen's budget, and already various ways have been suggested for distributing this fund.

Beginning in April, when the new fiscal year opens, at least $1,500,000 will be spent on "additional administrative improvements" in each hopen, and remaining $6,000,000 on "other purposes," including the cultivation of raw cotton, the establishment of relief warehouses and the maintenance of Japanese advisers.—Union News.

Hopen-Chian Advisers

Peiping, Feb. 6. Plans are being put ahead in Tientsin for the attachment of Japanese advisers to the Hopen-Chian Political Council's departments of diplomacy, communications, transportation, agriculture, military affairs and mining.

Negotiations have been started to obtain the services of advisers, and

The Chinese have expressed a desire that each adviser be an authority in his respective field, the dispatch said.

Upon the appointment of the Japanese advisers, the new independent administration in North China is expected to augment its activities at once for the development of natural resources, notably coal and oil, the improvement of communications, including the establishment of a direct radio service with Japan, and the cultivation of special diplomatic relations with Manchukuo.

The Japanese advisers will be appointed to their posts before the end of this month.

Among the ranking advisers will be Major-General Kenji Dohara, head of the Mukden intelligence bureau of the Japanese army in Manchuria.—Union News.

Frontier Problem

Dairen, Feb. 6. The Kwangtung Army has made a statement rejecting the Soviet proposals for the acceptance of the present boundary line between the Soviet Territory and Manchukuo, contending that the line should be demarcated in accordance with Treaty, "which means that the frontier would be pushed further back into Soviet territory."

It is declared that the recent incidents have been due to the mistaken belief that the Japanese-Manchukuo forces are always guilty of trespassing, and the Kwangtung Army believes that all the troubles are capable of amicable solution if the boundary is properly defined.—Reuter.

THE FRENCH CONVENT

ANNUAL PRIZE-GIVING AND CONCERT

The annual prize-giving of the St. Paul's Institution (French Convent School) was held in the School Hall yesterday afternoon. A large number of parents and friends were present, and a concert presented by the girls was very much appreciated. Mrs. G. R. Sayer, the Director of Education, distributed the awards, and was presented with a basket of flowers.

Mr. Byrne said: Before presenting my report for the past year I should like (on behalf of the Reverend Mother Provincial and the Staff) to extend a hearty welcome to Mr. and Mrs. Sayer, who have honoured us with their presence to-day and also to thank Mrs. Sayer for coming to give out the Prizes and Certificates. The year 1935 has been a year of steady work, with an increase in various activities and an increase in numbers. The highest number on the roll in 1935 was 382—370 in 1934 and a good average attendance has been maintained during each month of the year.

The Annual Inspection of the school took place on December 12 and 13, when Mr. Ralston, Inspector of English Schools, visited all the classes and reported favourably on the building, equipment, discipline, and general organisation of the School.

Another new Irish Teacher arrived from Europe in November and took up duties in the school.

We have always considered the visit of the Inspector each year, not merely a visit of inspection, but rather a visit giving helpful suggestions, and in this respect we wish to thank Mr. Ralston for his suggestion with regard to the division of the classes in separate rooms. This suggestion has been carried out and is proving beneficial to all concerned.

Most of the written and oral work in the classes was considered good. Unseen dictation was excellently done in some classes while in others there was great keenness and an agreeable readiness to answer questions. A greater cultivation of expression in reading and recitation was recommended. The singing and the handwork in the Kindergarten classes were excellent and excellent in the Junior classes.

Mrs. Ralston very kindly spent a morning in the school visiting the needlework, which she found excellent and we thank her for useful suggestions in the needlework section for the younger children.

Medical Inspections. The Medical Inspection of the school and pupils was conducted by Doctor F. Bunje, D.M.C.P. (London). In his report he says that an examination of the pupils found them all in good health; and an inspection of the school premises showed good state of repair and excellent Sanitary and Hygienic conditions.

On account of the arrangement of the subjects in the new School-leaving Certificate Syllabus an elementary knowledge of science was considered necessary. Consequently an up-to-date and well-equipped laboratory for practical work in Physics and Chemistry has been erected in the school. Practical work in Botany is included and this subject is taken for the School Certificate examination.

A Girl Guide Company had already been inaugurated in the school some years ago and thrived for some time, but this company like several others suffered greatly through lack of Captains. We are therefore greatly indebted to Lady Southern for providing excellent Captains for us in the person of Mrs. Moser, to whom we wish to tender our thanks for her devoted direction of the Company, which now consists of 6 Patrols, 4 Patrols of 5 and 2 of 6.

We are grateful to Mrs. Holo and her assistants for their devotedness to the Brownie Pack. The Brownies have been growing apace; many have entered the Girl Company. We should like to stress for parents the advantages gained by children who join the Pack. The training, the social spirit, the selflessness developed are so many factors in the most important stage of education, the development of character. Games and sports have their part to play in a school's activities by no means a negligible one. Now a playground has been provided for netball, and tennis matches are played frequently.

University Exams.

At the examination held at the University in June—three pupils passed the Matriculation—two with honours and several distinctions, and one with distinction in Domestic Science. Three pupils obtained the School-leaving Certificate one with distinction in French thus winning the Montargis Prize for French and one with distinction in Biblical knowledge. Three other pupils in Class I presented eight subjects and passed in seven—two with distinction in Spanish. They did not however obtain certificates because they failed to pass in Algebra.

OTTAWA PARLIAMENT

CEREMONIES DISPENSED WITH OWING TO MOURNING

Ottawa, Feb. 6. The Canadian Parliament was opened to-day and the Governor General, Lord Tweedmuir, gave an address in both English and French as is customary. The present Liberal Government is expected to have better support than the last Conservative government, as all governments of the provinces are Liberal, except that of Alberta.

The ceremonies connected with the opening of Parliament have been dispensed with this year owing to court mourning for the late King George V.—Reuter's Bulletin.

American Treaty

Ottawa, Feb. 6. Parliament, in which the Liberals have an unprecedented majority of 109, has been convened and is expected to ratify the American Reciprocity Treaty after a battle due to complaints that the United States benefits too much.—United Press.

Alberta Complaints

Edmonton, Feb. 6. Alberta's Social Security legislation has elected to support the Premier, Mr. William Abernethy's plan, for $25 a month for every adult, and has convened to face protesting delegations who have not seen their basic dividends for the first month of the administration. Since the province is heavily indebted it is not likely that the credit plan will be inaugurated. Mr. Abernethy said the discontent at the failure to fulfil the platform, was due to firstly the basic dividends, secondly price fixing, and thirdly, the continuous flow of credit. He said, "Stop your confounded grumbling," and he recalled that the campaign estimates that eighteen months are needed to establish the plan.—United Press.

Scholarships

The Luard Scholarship for 1935-1936 was awarded to Ems Julebin. The King Edward Scholarship of the University was obtained by Josephine Chou who passed the Matriculation with Honours and 4 distinctions.

In the League of Nations Poster Competition the Prize presented by Lady Southern was won by Annie Sullivan; and in the League of Nations Essay Competition the work of Freda Salmon was specially commended.

A special prize for Good Conduct and Integrity, and the honour of having her name inscribed on Lady Peel's shield for the year 1935 have been awarded to Violet Bradbury.

Music Examinations

All the pupils who were presented in the various stages for the Trinity College of Music (London) passed—several with honours.

The pupils are always happy to help in any social work. Besides helping at the various charity bazaars and street collections, they respond willingly to all the appeals made for funds for the poor and distressed. They collected a substantial sum for the Relief Fund for the flooded districts of China, and have now become interested in the Street Sleepers home in Kowloon for which they will make a collection in the school each month during the cold season.

Reverend Mother and Staff wish to thank the parents for helpful co-operation. There is no need to insist on the necessity of harmony between parents and teachers, to whom parents entrust one of their greatest responsibilities. The happy spirit of the school is bound up with it.

We also thank sincerely those who have kindly contributed towards the prize fund. And we thank those whose presence here to-day is an encouragement and stimulus to the work of teachers and pupils.

Mrs. Sayer was then called upon to present the prizes.

OH DEAR! OH LORD! I'VE DONE IT AGAIN

slow bowler to use in a case like this to tempt the batsmen."

LAST SATURDAY

I have not yet referred to the non-League game between the H.K.C.C. and the Civil Service, which was interesting apart from the actual play, from the fact that the improvement shown by the Civil Service recently was maintained though I freely admit that the absence of T. A. Pearce and E. R. Duckitt not only weakened the Club batting—which did not matter—but also the Club bowling, which did matter very much.

I am told on good authority that Perry and Richardson batted very well and that the College was very steady. The latter batsmen all had a go in the attempt to score rapidly and a declaration at 177 for eight wickets was quite creditable. I hear Grovler was making the ball turn tremendously, and kept a beautiful length, but the wicket was a bit too slow for him.

For the Club, Owen Hughes who came in first with T. E. Pearce was splendidly caught by Baker in the slips off McLellan before he had really got rolling, but Pearce and Marshall put things right and Barnes and Hayward were strong at the end, when a failure on either part might have given the C.S.C.C. some chance of a win—or so it was hoped by the fielding side!

But actually the Club have batting all through and even with Al Pearce and Duckitt off they did not have to call on J. Stein who is a useful forcing bat.

Although his figures were not very startling, I gather Baker bowled very well indeed for the Civil Service, and he did them a great service when he yoked Gillespie's leg stump just as he was looking set for one of his big hitting innings.

Wallington who came down to score for the Club played for the C.S. who were a man short and judging by his good fielding it would seem possible that he may yet be able to resume his place in the side.

JUNIOR GAMES

The Navy were not at full strength when their second eleven played Rectorio and a rather exciting draw was the result. On the Club ground the wicket was taking a lot of spin and the C.S.C.C. Juniors gave the Club second a scare as when thirteen runs were wanted only two wickets were left. Stein however, who seemed to me to be a bat far above second eleven form hit excellently, hooking everything short of a length just where it should go, and very hard. I don't know how he would shape against first League bowling but I should rather like to see him whose faster deliveries were kicking passly, bowled for the Club, spinning the ball a lot from the off, while for the Civil Service, Ling certainly deserved more than the one wicket he got. Westlake made a very fine catch running to gully from slip to put Armstrong out.

TO-MORROW'S GAMES

In the Senior Division there are two League games as the C.S.C.C. journey to Sookpoo to take on the Army. Although the latter are without Garthwaite, Williams and Welch, the visitors will have to go all out to win. I rather expect a draw. The K.C.C. first team, according to their card is at home to the C.C.C. while the C.C.C.'s card states that they are at home to the K.C.C. I give it up! Anyway they and their seconds have a League encounter, wherever it may be. If the K.C.C. can win outright they will be adding a deal of interest to the fight for the Shield.

The Club are at home to the Navy in a non-League game and I rather think that it is a combination of the first and second elevens on each side, as G. A. Stewart is getting married and two teams from the Club are not available. My heartiest congratulations and good wishes, and, I know, those of all cricketers go to him and his bride.

JUNIOR DIVISION

Police and C.S.C.C. are at home to Army Service Corps and R.A.M.C. respectively, while I have already mentioned the K.C.C.-Craigengower game. In non-League games I only know of the I.R.C. who are at home to the Rectorio.

NEW YORK STOCK
EXCHANGEMARKET IRREGULAR YESTERDAY

New York, Feb. 6.
Swan, Culbertson and Fritz Dow Jones Summary of yesterday's market: The market to-day was active, but irregular owing to profits taking late in the session after the whole market had early on reached a new ground since 1931. Gains were held until near the close. Investment buying sent American Telephone and Telegraph shares to a new high level since 1931. Motors were generally mixed. Chrysler stocks recovered sharply upon its dividend declaration, but these issues later declined. Railroad, utility and aircraft securities dipped, while farm implement, communication, railroad equipment, coal and amusement securities advanced. Silver, copper and gold stocks were quiet. Stocks on the Curb Exchange were irregular and quiet. Utility issues were irregularly higher. Selective industrial issues were firm, but mining shares were mixed. The market for bonds was upward, led by railroad and communication issues.

Swan, Culbertson and Fritz Dow Street Journal Comment:—"Two big utility refunding loans, totalling $120,000,000, are in nearly prospect by the Consolidated Gas Company and the Consumer Power Company. It is estimated that the Western Union's net income last year was around $5.00 per share. It is reported that cable business so far this year is 15 per cent. above that of last year. Brokers are predicting that the Country's loss of Gold has ended. Public interest in certain issues, falling under $2.00, is increasing.

S. C. & F. New York office cables: Stocks: This market maintained a firm tone and traders continue bullish. Woolworth sales were off .02 per cent. during January. The Alaska Juneau Mining Company earned $200,000 in January, against $130,000 during the corresponding month of last year. The value of stocks listed on the Stock Exchange totalled $50,164,000,000 on February 1st, compared with $49,946,000,000 on December 31st.

Cotton: Operation is developing to the selling plan of Government stocks. A private bureau estimates a 17 per cent. increase in acreage is contemplated. Continued irregularity is probable.

Wheat: The possibility of damage to the Winter crop owing to the extreme and prolonged cold weather is ignored. The Canadian surplus question dominates the market.

Rubber: Broad buying was resumed and all "spot" offerings were taken here. The market is firm.

SCRATCHING never gives a DOG relief

—but it often leads to Eczema!

A word of warning if your dog is scratching. He is feeling the terrible itching sensation under his skin which all dogs experience when their blood is impure. Scratching won't give him relief—but it might easily lead to eczema. First a bare patch in his coat and then... trouble!

Eczema is painful, and difficult to cure, so stop your dog scratching now by purifying his blood with a course of Bob Martin's Tasteless Condition Powders.

Your dog's skin is non-porous and he cannot perspire. He is denied that easy means of getting rid of impurities from his blood, but because he lives with you and eats prepared foods his blood is continually being loaded with impurities. To put it bluntly, unless you provide your dog with a blood corrective regularly you neglect him.

Start now to keep him fit and happy always. Give your dog Bob Martin's Condition Powders three times a day on two successive days in every week. Because they purify and refresh the blood Bob Martin's Tasteless Condition Powders prevent and cure all common blood disorders such as continual scratching, listlessness, loss of appetite, loose coat, sulky temper, eczema and swellings between the toes. Bob Martin's Tasteless Condition Powders are obtainable in packets of 9 powders, and in boxes of 21 powders. Full instructions enclosed.

HELENA MAY CONCERT

TALENTED ARTISTES GIVE FINE ENTERTAINMENT

The many absentees from last night's Helena May Concert will be disappointed to know that they missed the introduction to the Hongkong public of another musical find in the person of Mrs. Niel McGowan, L.R.A.S.

This talented artiste gave seven delightful songs (plus one encore) and even then the audience, regrettably small, was by no means satisfied. Mrs. McGowan is a mezzo-soprano with a wide range of tone, extremely pure and sweet, and with a clarity of enunciation which is rarely met with. Her high notes were attained without effort and one felt that if the smallness of the hall had not called for restraint, she could have given greater power to her songs.

Miss C. M. Braga, F.R.C.L., has a well-grounded reputation for her performance on the piano, but in the short time she occupied the stage last night with classical pieces she aroused as much enthusiasm as a newly found star. Playing Bach, Saint-Saens, Chopin, Palmgren and Fibrich without music, this talented girl entranced the audience with her delicate touch expert fingering and interpretation of the themes. Miss Braga returned twice to the stage in response to repeated applause.

Mrs. H. Arnold gave a very able rendering with the cello of Preludio, Gavotte, La Fapillon and Minuet, her spirited playing of the three pieces being outstanding.
Mrs. H. Evillie accompanied Mrs. Arnold, and Mr. M. Barton accompanied Mrs. McGowan.

STORM OVER BRITAIN

One looks out upon a dark sea of doubt towards Europe. The only glimpse of something other than the monotonous heave of recurring waves of fear comes with the flash of a breaking crest, some crisis or other. There is an ominous muttering behind the clouds. They heard it on Wednesday in the House of Commons. Two veteran statesmen of different temperaments and of opposite politics, Mr. George Lansbury and Mr. David Lloyd George, warned the Government of the nearness of the storm about the coasts of England, and of the danger it might bring to the whole of the Empire. They called for quick conference, for an assembly of nations to debate the economic complexities which have given rise to the crisis. They were answered briefly. A Government spokesman declared that not a bit of the Empire's soil would be sacrificed nor an ounce of its wealth contributed to pacify any belligerent—this is our interpretation—and that an international conference at this stage was too risky a thing to attempt. If it failed it would heighten the tension and accentuate the danger of a clash. The motion of the veteran Labourite, Lansbury, and the robust war-time Prime Minister, Lloyd George, was lost. The Government presently announced that Great Britain's new defence programme was virtually completed. Within a few hours, a morning newspaper announced the accomplishment of a Russo-Rumanian treaty of mutual assistance, within the frame-work of the League Covenant, and built along the same lines as the Franco-Russian pact. That was a lightning flash. Presently from the newspapers of Germany, and perhaps Poland, will come the mutter of thunder; for these pacts give Germany a feeling of insecurity, as though she were being hemmed in by unseen but none the less menacing forces. There is no break yet in the storm-wrack. No light shines through. At this time of stress, the people of our Empire require a leader of tremendous vitality, courage and diplomacy. The world needs such a man. King Carol's may have been a small voice in the storm, but his words also may have been inspired. "I am confident his experience will prove most valuable in his relations with all men and all countries," Carol of Rumania said of England's King. Of this we, too, are certain. It is our earnest hope that, like his illustrious grand-father, he may come to be known to posterity as "Edward the Peace-Maker."

The United States Wonders ...

A MAN to Beat ROOSEVELT this Year?

By
Raymond Swing

Mr. Raymond Swing is well known in Britain for his brilliant and lucid exposition of American affairs, relayed weekly by wireless from New York for British listeners. For ten years until recently he was London correspondent of the "Philadelphia Public Ledger."

PRESIDENT Roosevelt can be thankful that the election of 1936 is not to be decided by the business men of the United States. Wherever they meet, he and his policies are denounced with an intolerance beyond the normal heat of politics, and certainly beyond the pale of balanced judgment.

The bitterness of business men—one could say of the upper middle class—against Roosevelt is an outstanding phenomenon of American politics to-day. It is irrational enough to call for a psychological explanation. It may be due to the fact that less than four years ago, during the bank crisis of 1933, these same persons were as ecstatic about Roosevelt as they are now resentful.

These business men and their circle cannot be won over by Roosevelt this year.

NOTES OF THE DAY

TRADE RECOVERY

The fact that Mr. Cordell Hull, U.S. Secretary of State, and Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador, are at present engaged in a series of conferences, aiming at the promotion of international trade recovery, encourages the hope that ere long some definite move will be made towards this end. At the moment, neither Britain nor the United States have put forward any concrete proposals, but a most useful purpose should be served by exploratory talks of this character, which are a pre-requisite of any agreement which may eventually be achieved. At the moment, there does not seem much likelihood that another World Economic Conference would prove productive of results. For the time being, therefore, the best method of approach would appear to lie in the direction of bilateral talks having as their object the conclusion of new trade agreements between various nations. Britain herself has met with a considerable measure of success along these lines, whilst the recently-concluded agreement between the United States and Canada also points to the possibilities, within certain limits, of this procedure. Without question, a comprehensive commercial treaty between Britain and the United States, supplemented by an agreement on monetary matters, would do much to restore world trade. It is clear that progress towards this end will continue to be relatively slow so long as excessive restrictions are permitted to obstruct the flow of commerce.

Recent polls show Borah as one of the two most popular Republican candidates. He tends to use his strength to wrest control of the party from ex-President Hoover. He probably does not care, as a man of 70, to take on the burden of office himself.

It is his fortune that they comprise a small minority. Also it is his fortune that their attitude has inspired most of the political arguments now being put forward by the Republicans. They are so preoccupied in tearing to pieces the fallen angel that they are offering no alternative policy beyond a return to nineteenth-century laissez-faire.

And thus the issue, as they present it to the public, is Roosevelt versus himself, and this, I repeat, is his fortune.

Outside business circles the vote on this issue, if it were taken to-day, would slightly favour the President. He has not defeated himself in the affection and respect of the great mass of the people, who still like him for trying, while they do not approve of all he tried. And this year, unless the Republicans raise up a candidate, offering an appealing and constructive alternative to the New Deal, or unless the President himself commits some ruinous blunder, he will not be defeated.

The one Republican who might equal Roosevelt in arousing popular enthusiasm is the one most like him in his mild radicalism, Senator Borah, of Idaho. He is like him, too, in not being financially orthodox.

He is a "silver" Senator, hence a currency tinkerer. Still worse, he is flirting with supporters of the Townsend Plan (a rotating old-age pension scheme giving every man and woman over 65 the sum of £40 a month, which they must spend within the month).

BORAH has been the great Lone Wolf of Washington and has built a national reputation unequalled by any man in Congress. Where he differs from Roosevelt is in wanting to smash monopoly and to return to unbridled competition in business, hence to avoid governmental intervention.

Recent polls show Borah as one of the two most popular Republican candidates. He tends to use his strength to wrest control of the party from ex-President Hoover. He probably does not care, as a man of 70, to take on the burden of office himself.

The other outstanding candidate is Governor Alf Landon, of Kansas. So far the country knows only a few facts about for some measures of the New Deal, hence is no reactionary. He has opposed others, hence he is independent. He is a student, moderate fortune as an in-and more human and humane than either Landon or Knox.

restoring full competition in business, and an advocate of economy and orthodoxy in national finance. He is vigorous, outspoken and upright.

So far he has been content to be one of the most intolerant of Roosevelt's critics. As a public speaker he is hard to the point of being metallic, and utterly without eloquence, a handicap not balanced by the impression of being sincere and courageous.

THE leader of the Republican Party is still Mr. Hoover, and as the campaign draws near his shadow over his party mounts and darkens. His is a painful presence. Qualified by gifts and outlook to lead this year's fight, certainly more so than Knox or Landon, he still might be a fatal candidate.

In the popular mind the Great Depression bears his name. This may be an historic injustice, but it is a fact. It was the Hoover Depression. The retirement and silence he imposed on himself after his defeat four years ago have now ended. He is travelling and speaking; he actually is leading.

One other candidate so far must be taken into account, but afraid of them; his motto is "Beware." He resigns himself to growing old in a nice, comfortable place. In the space that stretches between the radicalism of Borah and the stark conservatism of Hoover, he occupies comfortable men?

Middle-Aged Englishmen

By Hilda Lurcott

WHY are our middle-aged Englishmen so dull in comparison with their Continental contemporaries? A Frenchman or an Italian of 45-50 is a charming, intriguing creature, enjoying life, ready for any adventure, an excellent companion, but the average Englishman of that age is a grim, obstinate being, whose life has become a routine of fixed habits which must never be broken.

He has his cold bath, his round of golf, his dinner at eight, and plays bridge with the same people with infallible precision. He refuses to be jostled out of his moorings. He hates meeting new people, shuns new restaurants. Husbands are slightly worse than bachelors, but there is little in it. Having lived for some time on the Continent I sadly notice the difference. The middle-aged foreigner is a delightful man, whether single or married. He is spontaneous, accommodating, ready to participate in any amusement, full of ideas. He is an excellent dancer too, far better than most English husbands, who can't be bothered to learn.

He is witty, full of vivacity, and has that happy knack of conveying those subtle little compliments and insinuations which are so pleasing to women. He has not grown too old to be entertaining; to put himself out to please women. He likes planning surprises, doing unexpected things on the spur of the moment. But the middle-aged Englishman is a staid and elderly gentleman, who hates pines, moonlight drives, parties. He is courteous to women, but afraid of them; his motto is "Beware." He resigns himself to growing old in a nice, comfortable place. In the space that stretches between the radicalism of Borah and the stark conservatism of Hoover, he occupies comfortable men?

Americans Coldly Received

AT OPENING OF THE WINTER OLYMPICS

Garmisch Partenkir, Feb. 6. Spectators at the opening of the Winter Olympic Games here to-day vigorously applauded the European and Oriental squads when they paraded before Herr Hitler and other notable Nazi leaders, while the Canadians were mildly cheered.

But for the American contingent the crowd was in absolute silence, after which the Yankees proceeded to beat Germany by a goal to nil in the opening ice hockey match for the meeting.

Gordon Smith of Boston scored the lone goal in the first period, but both teams were ragged and there was no team work displayed.

Subsequently Canada beat Poland by eight goals to one while Hungary defeated Belgium by 11 goals to 2.

BRITAIN'S THREAT TO WITHDRAW

Provides Sensation At Olympiad

Garmisch Partenkirchen, Feb. 6. When Herr Hitler, surrounded by General Goebbels, Minister for Propaganda and other Nazi leaders opened the Winter Olympiad to-day bands played the Heilswall song and "Deutschland Über Alles" as the flag of each nation participating was lowered in salute.

Hitler responded with an upraised arm.

A sensation was provided by the British threat to withdraw their ice-hockey team in consequence of the suspension of two British-born Canadian members of the side by the International Ice Hockey Association.

BILLIARDS

EXCITING GAME

CHAMPIONSHIP UPSET

PEREIRA LOSES

A P. Pereira, jr., considered one of the leading competitors in the Colony senior billiards championship was eliminated from the competition last night when he lost an exciting second round match to Andrew Tse, by 500 to 495.

The match was played at the K.C.C. before something like 100 spectators who were thrilled by the closeness of the struggle. The contestants were never far away from each other and the winning points were obtained in an electrical atmosphere of silence.

Pereira recorded the best breaks of the evening making 47 and 43, while Tse's highest was a 37. But Tse scored consistently and usually completed between 15 and 20 when he went to the table.

It was a splendid game and a fine achievement by the winner, who now meets Lam Cho-cha in the third round, the winner of which match qualifies for the semi-final.

STOKE CITY BEAT BIRMINGHAM

London, Feb. 6. Stoke City garnered first division points before their own spectators to-day when they beat Birmingham by three goals to one in a re-arranged match.

The Women's Section of the European Y.M.C.A. has arranged a Games afternoon consisting of Bridge and Mahjong to be held in the West Lounge on Monday, February 17, at 3 o'clock. Tickets, which are $1 and include tea are being sold on behalf of the Hockey Club funds.

REACH TENNIS FINAL FINE MATCH YESTERDAY

DOUBLES TITLE QUEST

(By "Veritas").

If to-morrow Mrs. Wilson and Miss Rosamund Hancock, and Mrs. Kayll and Mrs. Dowling can reproduce the form which gave them such decisive semi-final successes, then I predict that this year's final of the ladies' doubles tennis championship is going to be one of the finest in the history of the competition.

Pitted yesterday against Mrs. Little and Mrs. Andrews, two exponents of no mean ability, Mrs. Wilson and Miss Hancock rushed through to an impressive victory in something like 35 minutes by the scores of 6-2, 6-0.

This semi-final match was played at the U.S.R.C. and provided an entertaining match. The winners started off at whirlwind pace and succeeded in maintaining it until the end. Miss Hancock's chiselling drives were followed by Mrs. Wilson's incisive smashing. The opposition were agitated badly, and though they defended stoutly they had no adequate answer to the ever-increasing pressure applied by the winners.

NEARLY PEAK FORM

Mrs. Wilson touched very nearly peak form, producing a dazzling array of strokes which earned her chief individual honours of the match. Though she hit very hard and with a fine deep length from the baseline, the main charm and effect of her ground strokes were in the subtle variations of length and pace imparted to shots nearly all of them addressed in the same manner.

Several times she caught Mrs. Andrews unawares, notably off service. From the net Mrs. Wilson "killed" with evident relish and just as much skill. Now and again she failed to connect correctly, but in the course of the two sets it can be said her overhead work was par excellence.

Miss Hancock was a model of stability from the baseline and gave the opposition a few samples of her running forehand drive, which is just as effective as it is pleasing to the eye.

HARD DEFENSIVE GAME

The losers played a hard game, but being denied the opportunity of attacking they were constantly at a disadvantage. Mrs. Andrews, taking a very late ball—seemed to me as a result of her grip which was decidedly "English"—drove powerfully but with a somewhat high trajectory which offered Mrs. Wilson many of her volleying opportunities. Of the two Mrs. Andrews was the steeper, particularly from the forecourt, where, when she did get the position, Mrs. Little several times committed unexpected mistakes.

Mrs. Little put in some pretty defensive work from the rear court, and twice made astonishing recoveries from smashes which looked as if they were out of the court just a little too much; had a great deal of the ball and usually broke down in the long-thrown rallies. Towards the end she switched over to that old troublesome stroke of hers—trying to chop in front of her ball which bounces no higher than the net. It let her down more than once.

Figures invariably are bugbears, and it is not advisable to judge the play in this match on the scores. There was a succession of fine rallies in the course of which all four players made shots of note. The losers would have captured several more games if they had boasted just the right finishing shots. They lost a lot on their own mistakes. Which does not mean the winners were not full value. They were, every bit of it. They played with better understanding and certainly had a greater variety of strokes.

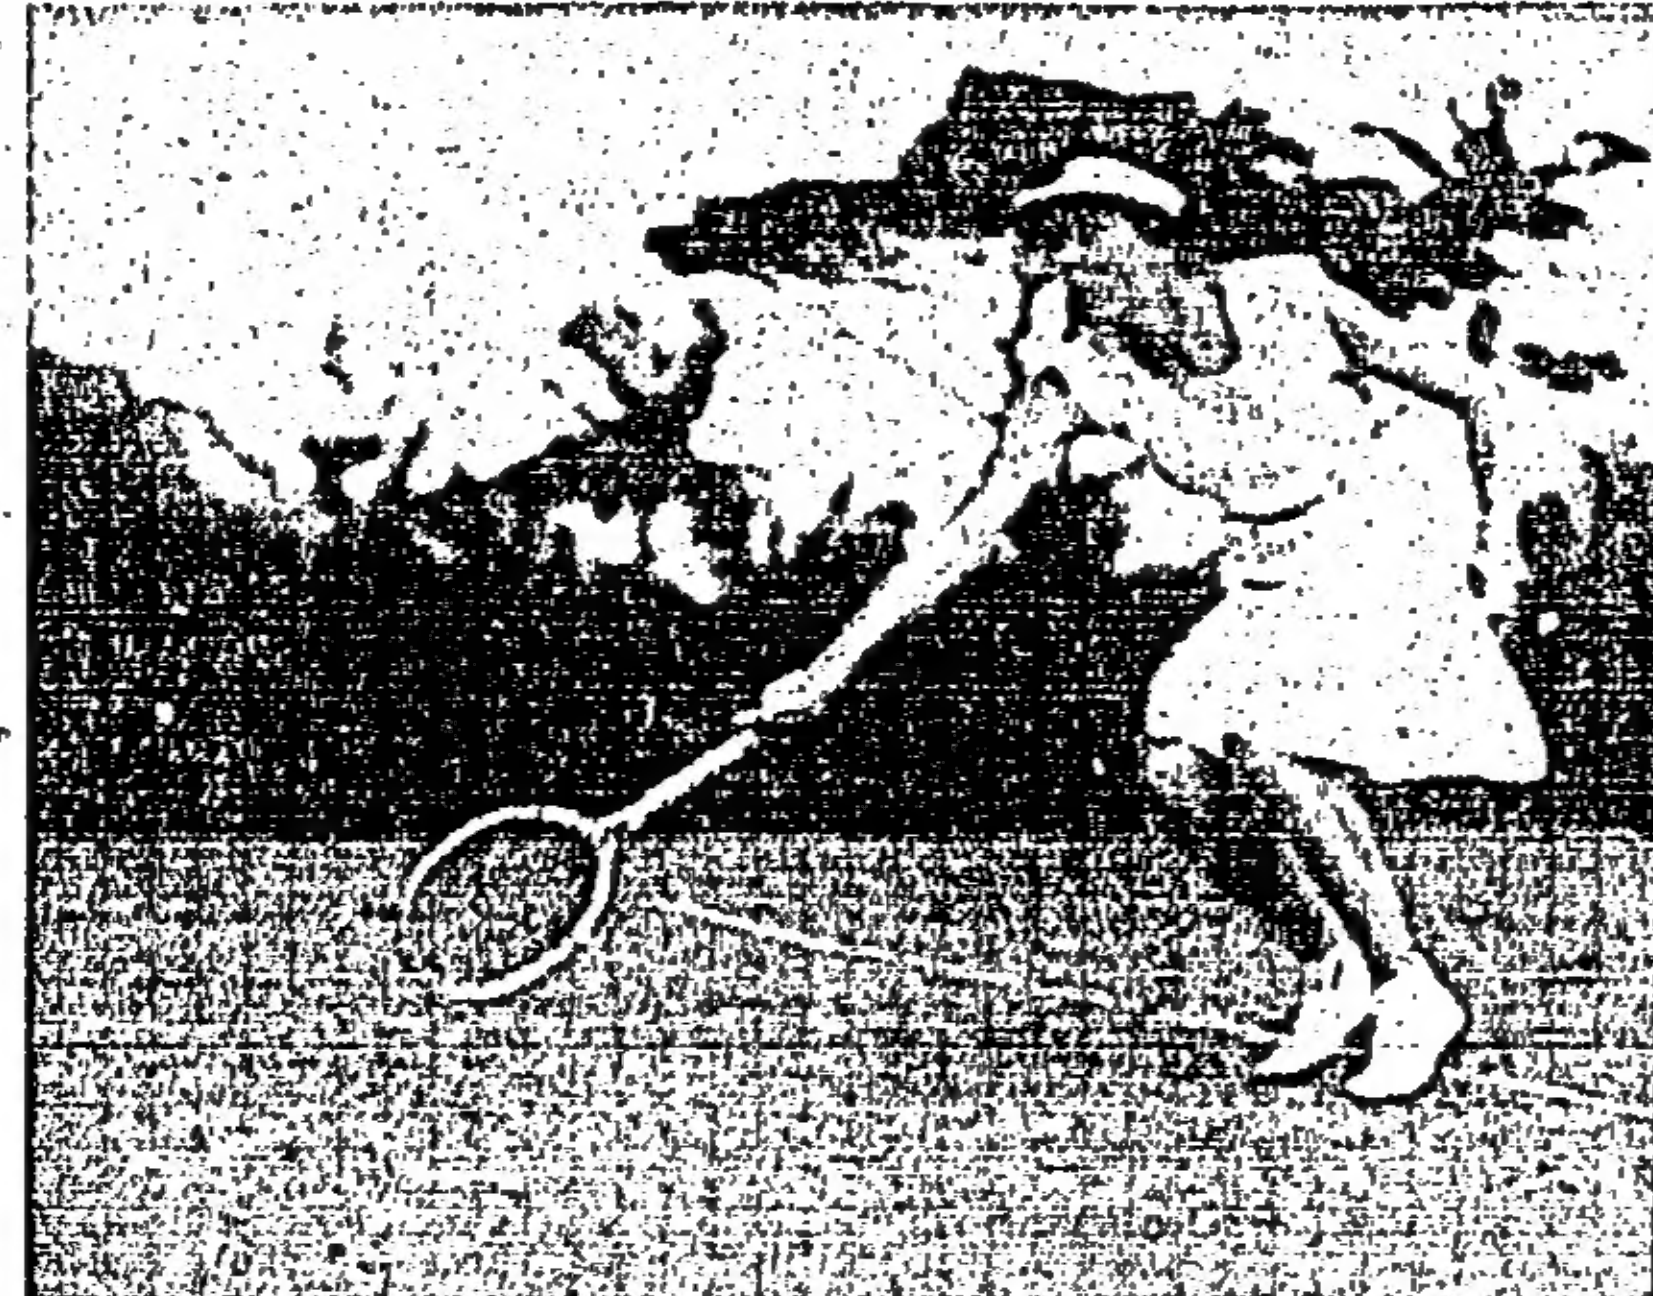

Mrs. Kayll, one of the finalists, was watching the game, and I have no doubt she was suitably impressed. To-morrow's match should be worth going a long way to see.

TO-DAY'S TWO MATCHES SEMI-FINALS OF THE CINGLES

(By "Veritas").

This afternoon at the U.S.R.C., two tennis matches will be played to determine the finalists in this year's ladies' singles championship.

Mrs. Kayll (holder) and Mrs. Nora Wilson are favoured to emerge from

A characteristic action of Mrs. Kayll, Colony's champion lady tennis player, who this afternoon meets Miss R. Hancock in the semi-final of the open lawn tennis championship.

CRICKET NOTES

"Oh Dear! Oh Lord! I've Done It Again"

QUOTHS R. ABBIT, BUT OFFERS A SPIRITED DEFENCE

Oh dear, oh Lord! Oh Lord, oh dear, I've gone and done it again! Or at least so some people seem to think. As a matter of fact I did not see either the K. C. C. and I. R. C. match nor the Varsity-Craigengower one. I think I said so. Perhaps I forgot it. My account of the I. R. C. match was given me by a player who has represented the Colony more than once in Inter-port Cricket (and that leaves a bit of room for guessing!), my comments were my own.

The general charges seem a bit vague by the way and headlines—but I don't quite get the bit about the finish of the game. I think that the feat of holding up the ninth wicket for three quarters of an hour was an excellent one, especially in view of the fact that the light was reported to me as appalling. (By the way, another person present said that play could have been continued for another five minutes! So what is one to believe and even if one sees one's self—other views diametrically opposite may be held by others!)

As for my remark that "somehow or other it was done" it was a reminiscence of Spofforth's remarks when the Australians went out to field in that last innings when they won the match at the Oval to secure for the first time the mythical Ashes—"This thing can be done." It was done and history was made. And yet I gather I am supposed to have belittled the feat of the later I.R.C. batsmen!

I think the fact is that the gentlemen who signed the letter—for which I take off my hat to them—have not quite realized that there may be more divergent views held by two or more eye-witnesses of any given incident, and further that no single person can witness more than one match in its entire length, or bits of it. I gather I am supposed to have belittled the feat of the later I.R.C. batsmen!

The person who gave me the report of the K.C.C. game was one who would meet with the approval of most cricketers as a capable observer. I am sorry my two critics don't like his views, they may however prefer the following report from another experienced cricketer which I print verbatim. I am sorry not to be able to do so, but the matches personally but it is a physical impossibility, and one can only do a match full justice when one has seen every ball of it, as I try to do in the Triangular Tournament and Interports.

Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Kayll, who will probably give better account of herself than she did in the semi-final last year. Miss Hancock has clearly improved her game in all directions and can now take the forecourt with some confidence. The game promises some sparkling exchanges.

In the other match Mrs. Wilson meets Mrs. Dowling, hitherto a comparative "dark horse". But Mrs. Dowling's success against Mrs. Little, and her clever play in the ladies' doubles championship which has helped to put her and Mrs. Kayll in the final, has clearly indicated that Mrs. Wilson is up against a tough proposition.

Mrs. Wilson may be able to rattle her opponent out of a normal game if she can successfully raid the net. In an exchange of ground strokes there would seem to be little to choose between the two.

SMARTER RUNNING BY DERBY GRIFFINS

NOTABLE PERFORMANCE BY ROYAL SCOT

SEVERAL TRAINING TIMES SHOW BIG IMPROVEMENT

(By "Captain Foster")

I said in my last notes that I was very disappointed with the slow cantering adopted at the Chinese New Year's holiday, but believe me, there were several fast gallops during the week-end and they were certainly a treat to watch, especially the performance of Royal Scot owned by Messrs. Bradbury and Harriman. Her achievement over the mile last Sunday was the best ever galloped by a Derby Griffin during the early mornings, and her finish was, without any fear of contradiction, not "all out." It must have been a source of satisfaction to her connections when this lovely grey mare gave a true display of her energy and speed, and no doubt Mr. Harriman, who was "at the wheel," was quite satisfied with the running of the mile in a wonderful time of 2.06.1/5.

I watched the mare very carefully, and the manner in which she obeyed the jockey, was very impressive. It would give a false colouring should I attempt to suggest that Royal Scot is now a "dead cart" for the Blue Riband, but I have no hesitation in saying that it must be a first class animal to deprive her of first place in the Hongkong Derby to be run at the Happy Valley on February 24, and I sincerely hope that I shall not be in the wrong box.

Royal Scot (Mr. Harriman) and Royal Consort (Russian riding boy) were given a fast tryout over a mile and the circuit was covered in 2.06.1/5, romping home inside 31 seconds. When entering the straight for the home run, it could be seen that Royal Consort was labouring, and about 100 yards from the finishing line, Mr. Harriman called upon Royal Scot for a final sprint. The mare not only responded gamely but left her stable companion almost standing.

This was the second best gallop performed by Royal Scot, the first being on Thursday, January 16, when she covered the Champions course (1 1/4 miles) in 2.49.4/5. In commenting on the said time, I said in my notes of January 25, that the mare was not "all out" and it is interesting to recall that her last mile was done inside two minutes eleven seconds. My actual views in connection with this gallop were "believe it or not, she was extended," and her startling performance of last Sunday, covering the mile in 2.06.1/5, coincided with my statement.

GALLOPING DATES CHANGED

The galloping days of various stables have been changed from Wednesday and Saturday to Thursday and Sunday respectively, and this had to be altered, owing to the first day of the Carnival being held on Saturday. Mr. Encarnacion would have put his legs over Rosemary, but owing to the late arrival of Empress of Russia on Sunday morning, the mile was taken up by the Russian riding boy over the Derby distance, and she took 2.34.4/5, to travel the journey. There was nothing to write home about the whole time, but the last mile inside two minutes twelve seconds showed that the animal has four useful legs. She finished the gallop like a steam-roller. It may not be known that Rosemary was absent from the course about 10 days owing to an accident just before the Chinese New Year and under the circumstances she is short of a few gallops.

In the same morning all the "Views" ponies were tested over one and a half miles' gallop, the best being done by Forest View who took 3.24.2/5 to journey the tour. She finished very badly and her last half-mile was covered in 1.13 flat. It is worth noting that her first mile of the circuit was performed in 2.11.2/5, and I am inclined to believe that (if Forest View is the best of Mr. Lan's string) she is more a sprinter than a stayer.

DUNBAR ASPIRANTS

Mr. and Mrs. Dunbar's aspirants had a go over 1 1/2 miles last Saturday and although Bear Claw's time was better than Thunder Bay's 3.4/5 seconds, I am of the opinion that the latter is a better pony. Bear Claw (Mr. Frost) and Boole Bay, a

THE GARRISON CUP RACE

Important Annual Meeting Event

(By "Captain Foster")

There are no records to show when races for the Garrison Cup (presented by the Officers of the Garrison) and the Royal Navy Cup (presented by the Officers of H. M.'s Navy) were first run but, these are important events of the Annual Race Meeting for China Ponies Subscription Griffins of any season. In reality, the race is more for the old Sub-Griffins, but Racing Boy was the only Subscription Griffin to win this coveted Cup in the first year of his public appearance, and was again successful in the following year.

It will be recalled that O-Moon was the only Sub-Griffin to annex three Garrison Cups and it was on account of this pony that "winner of Garrison Cup at any time is now barred" for the Royal Navy Cup. This restriction came into force since 1930 and it is amusing to relate that Blaire has three Navy Cups to his credit. As soon as he wins the Garrison Cup, he is ineligible for the "Jack Tar" Cup and it has been whispered that his chances are very rosy for the "Tommy Atkins" Cup.

THE OPPOSITION

Chief opposition in Wadebridge who is in good condition at the present moment, and there is also Cavalcade, Tiny Star and Young Chap to be considered. Wadebridge is in his best at the fall when Mr. G. Roza piloted him home in the St. Ledger and the Hongkong Autumn Sub-Griffins Champions, and should he reproduce the same form on February 24, I am afraid that Blaire will find him a hard nut to crack.

By virtue of only one win during 1935, the following ponies, Blaire, Copper Idol, Warrington and Young Chap will have to carry 8 lbs. penalty in the Garrison Cup, whereas Belmont Star and Wadebridge have incurred 7 lbs. extra. Iron Grey with Mr. Needa won the Garrison Cup last year and this pony, after an outing in the Double Tenth Meeting last October, was on the sick list for a

Prospects Of China Ponies

MR. L. DUNBAR'S QUEST

(By "Captain Foster")

We will not see much of our second class raters in action on the first day of the Carnival, but the Curragh Stakes over a mile (which is a new event in which A and B class ponies are barred) will certainly draw a big field on the second day and we should see a good race between High Speed, Jungle Jim, Monoplane, Soldier of China and Soldier of Peace. The training times of these ponies have not appeared in the newspapers but all are in good condition.

The Chatter Cup, presented by the late Sir Paul Chatter over a course of 1 1/4 miles, has drawn 16 good entries of "B" Class, China Ponies, and the lowest weight in this race is 105 lbs. to be carried by Hetman, King's Bounty, Pride of Tinsiao and The Tiger. By virtue of having won three races during 1935, King's Jubilee, Mistake Bay and Pontiac Bay will have to weigh out at 171 lbs. and this means 3 lbs. more than the top weight allowed to be allotted in the handicap events. It is too early yet to discuss the prospects, but surely, Hetman, Ribble and Sadco (if in condition) should have some say in the places. This Cup is worth winning.

The next event which is the tenth on the card of the second day is the

AUSTRALIAN SUB GRIFFINS PONIES ON THE UP-GRADE

(By "Captain Foster")

Messrs. Hall and Shenton's The Dumbler (Mr. Frost) and Miss Y. Shenton's Sheik-O-Fox (Mr. Butler) had a try-out last Sunday over the Derby course and they took 3.18.1/5 to cover the circuit, finishing the last quarter in 28 seconds. This gallop was held in the presence of the owners and I am sure that they must have left the course quite satisfied.

It was undoubtedly the best of this year's aspirants and The Dumbler finished gamely. It is interesting to note that his last one and a quarter miles were timed in 2.38.1/5, practically the same as performed by A Grand Times on January 4. I hear that Mr. D. S. Li will be riding the latter pony.

Strathroy was full of running last Saturday when he, in company with Ranger, galloped a mile in 2.02.4/5, and came home inside 28 seconds. Strathroy was sired by Buck of whom progeny has never raced here before and it is hard to say whether he is a sprinter or stayer. This pony is improving daily.

Violet Queen is in better mood now than what she was about a month ago. She was sired by Buck of whom progeny has never raced here before and it is hard to say whether he is a sprinter or stayer. This pony is improving daily.

SECOND HEAVY BADMINTON DEFEAT FOR RECREIO

Club de Recreio have sustained two very severe reverses in the badminton league during the last two days. Following on their trouncing in the mixed doubles on Wednesday, the men's doubles "B" team last evening visited Eliot Hall and were beaten by the "B" combination to the tune of eight games to one.

At the same time Chinese Recreation Club were lifting themselves to the top of the league in consequence of an overwhelming win against St. Andrew's "B" whom they defeated 8-1.

They assume this leadership for the first time this season and the accomplishment marks the consistent advance made by the team during the past two months. Although without the services of Gordon Lam, E. Y. Liang and H. T. Woo the Chinese were much superior to the Saints of whom only Bliss and Weill offered any real resistance.

SPORTS OUTLOOK FOR 1936

ENGLAND'S INTEREST IN ATHLETICS CRICKET AND TENNIS

(By Percy Rudd)

In these dark and dismal days it is a pleasant occupation to run a speculative eye over the sporting panorama of 1936. In the picture are such things as cricket Tests against India, played—let us hope—under a summer sun; Wimbledon's big parade of lawn tennis skill and beauty and fashion; the glories of racing at Epsom, Ascot, Goodwood, and the thrills of the eleventh Olympic Games, with more sunshine accompaniment, on the outskirts of Berlin.

Before these happen of course, we shall have scenes in a more wintry setting—the excitement of international football and of F.A. Cup, the clash of big boxers, the Grand National Steeplechase, the University Boat Race.

But with fog in the throat and frost in the bones, my body yearns for midsummer heat, so let us take what comfort we can by starting in the middle of the reel.

It is not merely right but expedient that we should do so, for the Olympic Games only come to us once in four years. I have no patience with the people who decry this vividly picturesque meeting of the world's best athletes—a meeting which has no counterpart in sporting endeavour or in spectacular interest.

The contrast between the way in which they are now conducted and the Games held in London in 1908 is in itself their justification.

REAL SPORTSMANSHIP

I remember my distinguished namesake, B. G. D. Rudd, Oxford Blue and South African Olympic champion, telling me of an experience of his in the Antwerp Games of 1920.

He was leading at a bend of the track in one of his races when an American competitor, coming up on the outside, jostled him and knocked him out of his stride and on to the grass. Immediately the offender said "Sorry, Rudd!" and dropped back, allowing him to resume his place.

That is the spirit which animates all the competitors nowadays, and the Germans, with their genius for organisation, may be relied upon to provide the perfect setting in 1936. Great Britain should enter into these Games full of confidence in her athletes. I do not remember a year when we had such a splendid collection of middle-distance runners.

There is no reason, indeed, why we should not win the Olympic events at 400, 800 and 1,500 metres, and I am not surprised if we do. Counting the Dominions as a part—were to provide the first three in the longest of these races, which is the equivalent of the English mile.

We have good sprinters and hurdlers, too, but in the field of any event, why it is that Englishmen never excel at jumping and throwing I do not know, but even here we are improving.

It is comforting, for instance to think that we have a pole vaulter who can clear 12 ft. 6 in., a shot-putter who can achieve about 48 ft., and a young javelin-thrower who has already beaten 100 ft.

ELASTIC CRICKET OUTLOOK

Cricket is more elastic in its outlook on such things as qualification rules than any other sport, and no one will regret that the best cricketer in India, the Nawab of Patnauli, who has played for England, is permitted to return to this country as the captain of the touring side.

We ought, I suppose, to beat this Indian team, but the stock of English cricket has never stood so low. South Africa and the West Indies, as well as Australia, have conquered us in recent Test matches, so it may now be India's turn.

Our game is suffering from a real lack of outstanding personalities, and I do not envy the selectors who at the end of the season will choose our team for the winter's tour of Australia. Where the bowlers are in from is not at the moment apparent, but perhaps the need will supply the men.

I wonder what is going to happen to the experimental lb.w. law when this tour takes place? By that time, of course, it may be embodied in the rules of the game, in which case the Australians might find themselves in a position of some difficulty.

In spite of the fact that many of their best cricketers are in favour of the new rule, the controlling council refused to play under it in South Africa this winter, presumably on the ground that the Africans had had a season's experience of the rule in England.

Well, they could have afforded to concede their opponents that handicap and the way would then have been cleared for a new law which nearly everyone agrees is bound to come. It is extraordinary how the

Why Ernest Tyldesley Is Not Captain

LANCASHIRE PREFER A YOUNGER MAN

Why was Ernest Tyldesley, the veteran cricket professional of Lancashire, not appointed to the county captaincy after he had been invited by some members of the committee to allow his name to stand?

Remembering Lord Hawke's famous exclamation, "Pray God no professional may ever captain England," I asked leaders of the game in Lancashire to-day whether such a question of principle had caused them to offer the captaincy to the young amateur, W. H. Lister, who has played for the county frequently since he came down from Cambridge writes a Special Correspondent.

Mr. T. A. Higson, chairman of the committee, would not admit that the decision had any such basis. "I can only refer you to the announcement that Mr. Lister has been chosen," he said.

TYLDESLEY NEARLY 47

Sir Edwin Stockton, former president of the club, said:

"We on the committee have the highest admiration for Tyldesley as player and man. But he is nearly 47 and cannot in the natural order of things go on playing much longer."

"That being so we took the long view and decided that it was better to appoint a young amateur. Lister is 24, a charming fellow, and a good and plucky player. I remember how he played a wonderful innings against Larwood at his best."

The intention of Tyldesley was that if he were invited to become captain he would play as an amateur, as did Jack Sharp in similar circumstances some years ago. Tyldesley has not signed a contract for next season, and Sir Edwin Stockton, after the committee meeting, sent him a telegram urging him to offer his services if required as an amateur.

"You have done big things in the past," says the telegram, "this action would be the biggest."

CONGRATULATIONS TO LISTER

Tyldesley has taken the decision of the committee like a good sportsman. When he heard the news he sent a telegram of congratulation to Lister in London.

Tyldesley has emphasised that he never sought the captaincy, although he commented to allow himself to be proposed. He is in no way grieved at the decision not to appoint him.

What about lawn tennis? Shall we keep the Davis Cup and the Wimbledon crown? The answer hangs on the fitness or otherwise of Fred Perry, Kay Stammers or Dorothy Round (who was suffering from too much tennis last summer) might very well win the women's singles championship, in spite of the two Helens from America; and we really ought to regain the Wightman Cup in the coming year.

AND GOLF?

Shall we keep the Open Golf Championship? Why not? We have more brilliant young stroke players than we ever had and we have lost that inferiority complex. But the Amateur Championship is, I am afraid, another story.

As to the big events of the late winter, I must leave the football season to look after itself, with the perhaps dangerous prospect that Sunderland will win the League championship and Wales the international Rugby honours.

There remains the Boat Race. Well, when Oxford can produce 25 eighties enthusiastic enough to row 17 miles in order to see the race between their university's Trial Eight—as Cambridge did—they may have a chance of once again beating the Light Blues from Putney to Mortlake. But not until.

BANK NOTE TRICK

MAN CONVICTED OF FRAUD AND SENTENCED

At the continued hearing of the case in which a man, Wong Fok, was charged with obtaining $24,500 by false pretences from another man, Tam Lin, on or before May 15, 1933, sentence of six months' hard labour was passed on defendant by the Magistrate, Mr. S. F. Balfour, at the Central Magistracy yesterday afternoon.

Mr. H. C. Macnamara appeared for the prosecution, instructed by Mr. D. McCallum, while Mr. C. A. S. Kuan represented accused.

At a previous hearing of the case, defendant was discharged on a count of conspiracy to defraud, by pretending that he could make banknotes of the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation.

Opening his defence, Mr. Kuan said that according to the evidence of the prosecution's witnesses were accomplices of his client and as such their evidence could not be relied on. There was no evidence whatever that any money had been stolen by means of a trick. It was quite possible that something had gone wrong with the electrical apparatus and the prosecution had proved was a tale which was consistent with defendant's innocence. They had not proved him guilty. If defendant could not be proved guilty, he could not be convicted, Mr. Kuan submitted.

Counsel said he thought the prosecution had proved that there were very good grounds for suspecting an offence had been committed, but one had first got to be satisfied that the judge should satisfy himself that the notes had not been accidentally destroyed. There was no evidence that they were not. In the absence of proof that defendant had taken the notes, there was no obligation on him to prove how they disappeared.

There had been no corroboration of the accomplices' evidence. The case had been proved by the prosecution to be a consistent one with defendant's complete innocence as with his guilt. Regarding the statement made by defendant to the Police, the amount involved was only $200. Counsel submitted that the charge was only raked up and brought in because of the other charge against accused.

Mention of Appeal
At this stage, counsel felt it would be improper for him to call evidence or put his client in the witness box. If defendant was convicted by his Worship, counsel would then appeal.

Replying to Mr. Just, Macnamara said that Tam Lin had known defendant on another occasion, when, according to defendant's statement, some sort of transaction had taken place. There was an interesting suspicion. The last amount of apparatus was in the possession of defendant. The prosecution knew as part of complainant's story that similar apparatus had been used in 1933, when the robbery took place. That afforded ample corroboration of complainant's case.

If the prosecution could not produce the apparatus, Mr. Macnamara agreed that his friend would then be perfectly right. They had this mass of machinery. The one person who could explain that was the defendant, and he was not prepared to explain. Referring to the statement, counsel said that if the defence was dissatisfied with the accuracy of the translation, they had the Chinese version to refer to.

When complainant left the room to fix another fuse, it was certainly long enough for accused to have extracted the notes. The prosecution had very strong reasons to suspect that the electrical apparatus was bogus.

Was it likely that $21,500 had been destroyed in that machine by defendant? It was quite incredible. Defendant and the others with him must have fished out the good notes and substituted rubbish. It had been proved beyond doubt that that was what in fact happened. On that evidence, it must be inferred that the crime was committed and defendant was the man who committed it.

After a short adjournment of ten minutes, Mr. Balfour gave his decision. He said that in the previous case, he had to discharge defendant because part of the evidence had not been clear. In the present case, the facts were highly clear. He held that Tam Lin's statement was true and must therefore convict defendant.

Sentence was then passed, and the apparatus and all other paraphernalia for making the banknotes were confiscated on the application of the Police.

Next day he reported the matter to the Inspector, after some hesitation, as the accused were his superior officers.—Reuter.

Berlin, Feb. 6.
The death has occurred of Dr. Wilhelm Solf, the famous German statesman, colonial administrator and diplomat, at the age of 73.—Reuter Special Service.

Wilhelm Solf, German ex-Minister and diplomat, was born in Berlin in Oct. 1862. At Kiel and Berlin he studied law and Oriental languages and in 1888 entered the service of the Foreign Office. In 1890-92 he was consul-general at Calcutta. Then from 1892 to 1898 he served in other branches of the civil service, returning, however, to the Foreign Office where he entered the colonial section.

In 1898 he was appointed a district judge for German East Africa and in 1900 went to Samoa where he became chairman of the municipal council of Apia. A year later he was made Governor of Samoa where he remained till 1911. He was beloved by the Samoans, for his policy was to guard this little paradise and keep it out of the hands of the world. He welcomed the fact that Samoa had no commercial future and that therefore he was not called upon in the name of progress to destroy one of the most attractive races in the world.

When in Nov. 1911, the Colonial Secretary, Von Lindquist, resigned in connection with the Franco-German Congo agreement, Solf succeeded him, retaining office during the war when he championed the cause of German colonial policy with much energy. Later he moderated his views, and in 1918, when the "German Society" in Aug. 1918, which attracted much attention he declared that there must be an end of the "knock-out blow" spirit. He spoke of the need for some way of avoiding future wars for the sake of humanity. In the Cabinet of Prince Max of Baden he became Foreign Secretary, retaining the post after the revolution had created an entirely new situation. But in Jan. 1919, he yielded to the attacks of the Independent Socialists and made peace with Brockdorff-Rantzau. In June, 1920, he was appointed chargé d'affaires in Japan and in Feb. 1921, ambassador there. He was elected president of the Asiatic Society of Japan in Dec. 1925—the first German to be so honoured. When he left the country in March 1926, he was loaded with honours. The honours press declared that no departing diplomat had received so many tokens of appreciation. On his return to Germany he was similarly honoured.

Outstanding Statesman
Dr. Solf, a statesman of rare cast, a skilful diplomat, an outstanding, a seeling administrator, a man of high culture and education, a master in the treatment of his fellow-men of all walks of life, always eager to learn, to understand, to mediate, to achieve the highest point of perfection in all his dealings, has in all his long career been a constant presence. His made friends wherever he has been, not only for himself, but also for the sake of Germany.

His adaptability to new circumstances and surroundings, his way out in clashes of opinion and to be a mediator between men and people and states, never left him and led him rapidly upwards in his career. In Berlin and London he studied philosophy and history, especially the Persian and Hindu languages. When he went to India to continue his studies at the source, he, almost accidentally, was appointed to act temporarily as German Consul General in Calcutta. This launched him on his diplomatic career. Later he went back to Berlin and studied law, entered the Colonial Office, was sent to Dares-Salam as district judge, mediated in 1899 on Samoa in a serious conflict between Germany and the one side and Great Britain and the United States on the other and was subsequently promoted president of the Municipal Council at Apia. When in 1900 a treaty was signed which made Samoa a German colony, he was appointed first German Governor of Samoa.

As Secretary of State for the Colonies he made several journeys to the German possessions in Africa on which occasion he always devoted his special attention to the native problem, realising that the solution of this question was the only possible basis for any far-seeing colonial policy which was to be more than just exploitation.

He kept interest in the German colonies awake and to work untiringly for all German interests in countries over-seas, were the problems nearest to his heart and which claimed most of his attention during the years of the war.

When finally the first signs of an approaching end of the war were being recognised and when it was found necessary to pave the way for the period of transition, Dr. Solf was made Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs in the last Imperial Cabinet under Chancellor Prince Max von Baden. And when the catastrophe came, it was Dr. Solf who remained in office in order to set to his subordinate an example of devotion to the fatherland and to duty, unhampered by personal party-political considerations.

After this was done and when the diplomatic service of the young Republic was again working smoothly, Dr. Solf, who did not find it his liking to be drawn into the whirlpool of mere party politics, resigned.

Tokyo Success
Dr. Solf went to Tokyo to take up the threads of diplomatic relations cut in 1914 and to renew not only political relations but also those of commerce and culture. That his untiring efforts were crowned with success, a success he had never been thought attainable, need not be emphasised here in the Far East. In the shortest possible time this man with his exceptional experience in world affairs and in the ways of men, had secured the confidence and the highest esteem not only of the Japanese statesmen, economists and savants, but also of all

EXTRADITION CASE

ECHO OF ATTEMPT ON WANG CHING-WEI

Wanted by the Nanking authorities allegedly on a charge of conspiracy to murder Mr. Wang Ching-wei at Nanking in November, four Chinese Yu Lap-fui alias Li Chi-on alias Li Shok-yu, an ex-colonel of a regiment in Shanghai, Chau Sai-ping, Wu Tai-hoi and Cheung Chi-hon, appeared before Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Magistracy yesterday afternoon, when extradition proceedings were continued.

Mr. D. L. Strellett conducted the case for the Crown, and Mr. P. H. Sin appeared on behalf of all defendants.

Yesterday's evidence dealt with the arrest and identification of the second, third and fourth fugitives, as evidence of identification with regard to the first fugitive had been taken at a previous hearing of the case.

Mr. Strellett, in dealing with the arrest of the defendants, first recalled that Yu Lap-fui was arrested on November 21. On the following day a Chinese detective, Lau Ming, was making enquiries into the case when about 4.30 p.m. he noticed a Chinese standing at the junction of Wong Nei Chong Road and Leighton Hill Road apparently waiting for a bus. The man was the third fugitive, and his behaviour roused the suspicions of the detective. The man carried an attaché case in one hand and a parcel in the other.

Objected to Search
The detective approached the man and spoke with him, saying wanted to search him. At first the man objected, and when asked by the detective what was in the attaché case he did not know its contents, and also said he was taking the attaché case to a certain Mr. Lee. Eventually the man agreed to a search, and the detective opened the attaché case and found in it a silk document bearing the name of the first fugitive. The detective accordingly took the man to the Police Station. In the attaché case and the parcel were found certain papers and letters, which the requisitioning Government were desirous of seeing, and he (Mr. Strellett) would not say very much about them until later, except to say they may have a bearing on the case. The third fugitive was also known to certain persons living at No. 7 Sharpe Street, first floor, where the first fugitive was arrested.

Dealing with the arrest of the second fugitive, Mr. Strellett said he was at No. 7 Sharpe Street, first floor, where the first fugitive was arrested. He was detained for enquiries, which were proceeding when a requisition came including his name and the names of the third and fourth fugitives. The fourth fugitive was arrested at No. 199 Wanchai Road, enquiries having led to that address.

Evidence was given by Lau Ming and Sergeant Meadows regarding the arrest of the fugitives, and also by Ching Yik-chuen, identifying them, after which the hearing was further adjourned.

circles of the Japanese population and even among the foreign diplomats, even the representatives of the nations who but a short time ago had fought against Germany in the field, and that to such a degree as hardly any foreign representative in Japan ever has attained.

When at the end of 1928 he left Tokyo to return to Germany, all those who knew him had the sincere hope that the brilliant qualities of Dr. Solf should again and for many years more be put to the service of the country and to the work of creating an understanding and peaceful co-operation between Germany and the other nations in the world.

On Dr. Solf's 70th birthday the "Deutsche Gesellschaft 1914", one of Berlin's most representative societies, of which Dr. Solf is one of the founders, gave a banquet for the veteran statesman and diplomat. The chairman of the society, Herr Schiller, in his address gave a vivid picture of the career of the well-known statesman.

The Japanese Ambassador, Mr. Obata, in a congratulatory address reviewed Dr. Solf's successful record, pointing out that it was due to him in the first place that relations between Japan and Germany had become so friendly.

Dr. Solf, deeply moved, spoke but briefly to express his profound thanks for the good wishes extended to him.

CHINESE EXPECT NEW INVASION

SUIYUAN BORDER THREATENED

MANCHUKUO FORCES PREPARE TO MOVE

KALGAN OFFICERS SEE CRITICAL SITUATION

Peiping, Feb. 7.
Chinese reports from Kalgan state that 5,000 Manchukuo and Mongolia troops, who occupied the six counties of Charhar in December, are now preparing to invade Suiyuan province.

Their alleged purpose is to add five more districts to the area under their control.

The Manchukuo troops are commanded by General Li Shou-hsin and their Mongol allies by Tso Shih-hai, who recently established an independent regime in the captured Charhar counties.

At the time of the occupation of the Charhar area in mid-December, it was revealed at a conference at Tientsin between the Japanese representative, General Kenji Doihara, and members of the Hopei-Charhar Political Council, that the Japanese insisted that Manchukuo and Mongolian troops should garrison the six Charhar districts seized. They comprise an area of about 40,000 square miles.

These districts are in the north of the province, but the Chinese contended that their control by Manchukuo and Mongolian troops would put foreign militarists in a position to seize Kalgan at any moment. Furthermore, the districts to the south were barren and mountainous, and not desired by the invaders, Chinese contended.

General Chang Chi-chung, on December 15, was known to be making preparations to resist any encroachment upon southern Charhar soil. The Charhar Provincial Chairman is determined to fight if necessary.

At the same time the Suiyuan Provincial Government sent representatives to Peiping to confer with General Chang for a joint defence system against Li Shou-hsin and his Manchukuo regiments.

Up to a few days ago it was hoped that the Charhar issue might be settled without further trouble, but the present reports from Kalgan indicate that action is again threatened, and that fighting on the Charhar-Suiyuan front is not unlikely.—Reuter.

DOMINIONS' WISHES RESPECTED

London, Feb. 6.

Reuter understands that the Imperial Conference, which is due to be held in London this year, will be postponed to 1937, in order to meet the wishes of the Dominion Prime Ministers, owing to the Coronation, which would have entailed visits to London in two successive years.

The date of the Conference will be settled by consultation with the Dominions when the Coronation is fixed.—Reuter Special.

ABERHART'S EVASION EBERHART'S EVASION

(SPECIAL TO "TELEGRAPH")

Edmonton, Feb. 6.

Alberta's social security Legislature, elected in support of Premier William Aberhart's promise to pay $25 a month to every adult in this Canadian province, convened to-day to face a horde of protesting delegations.

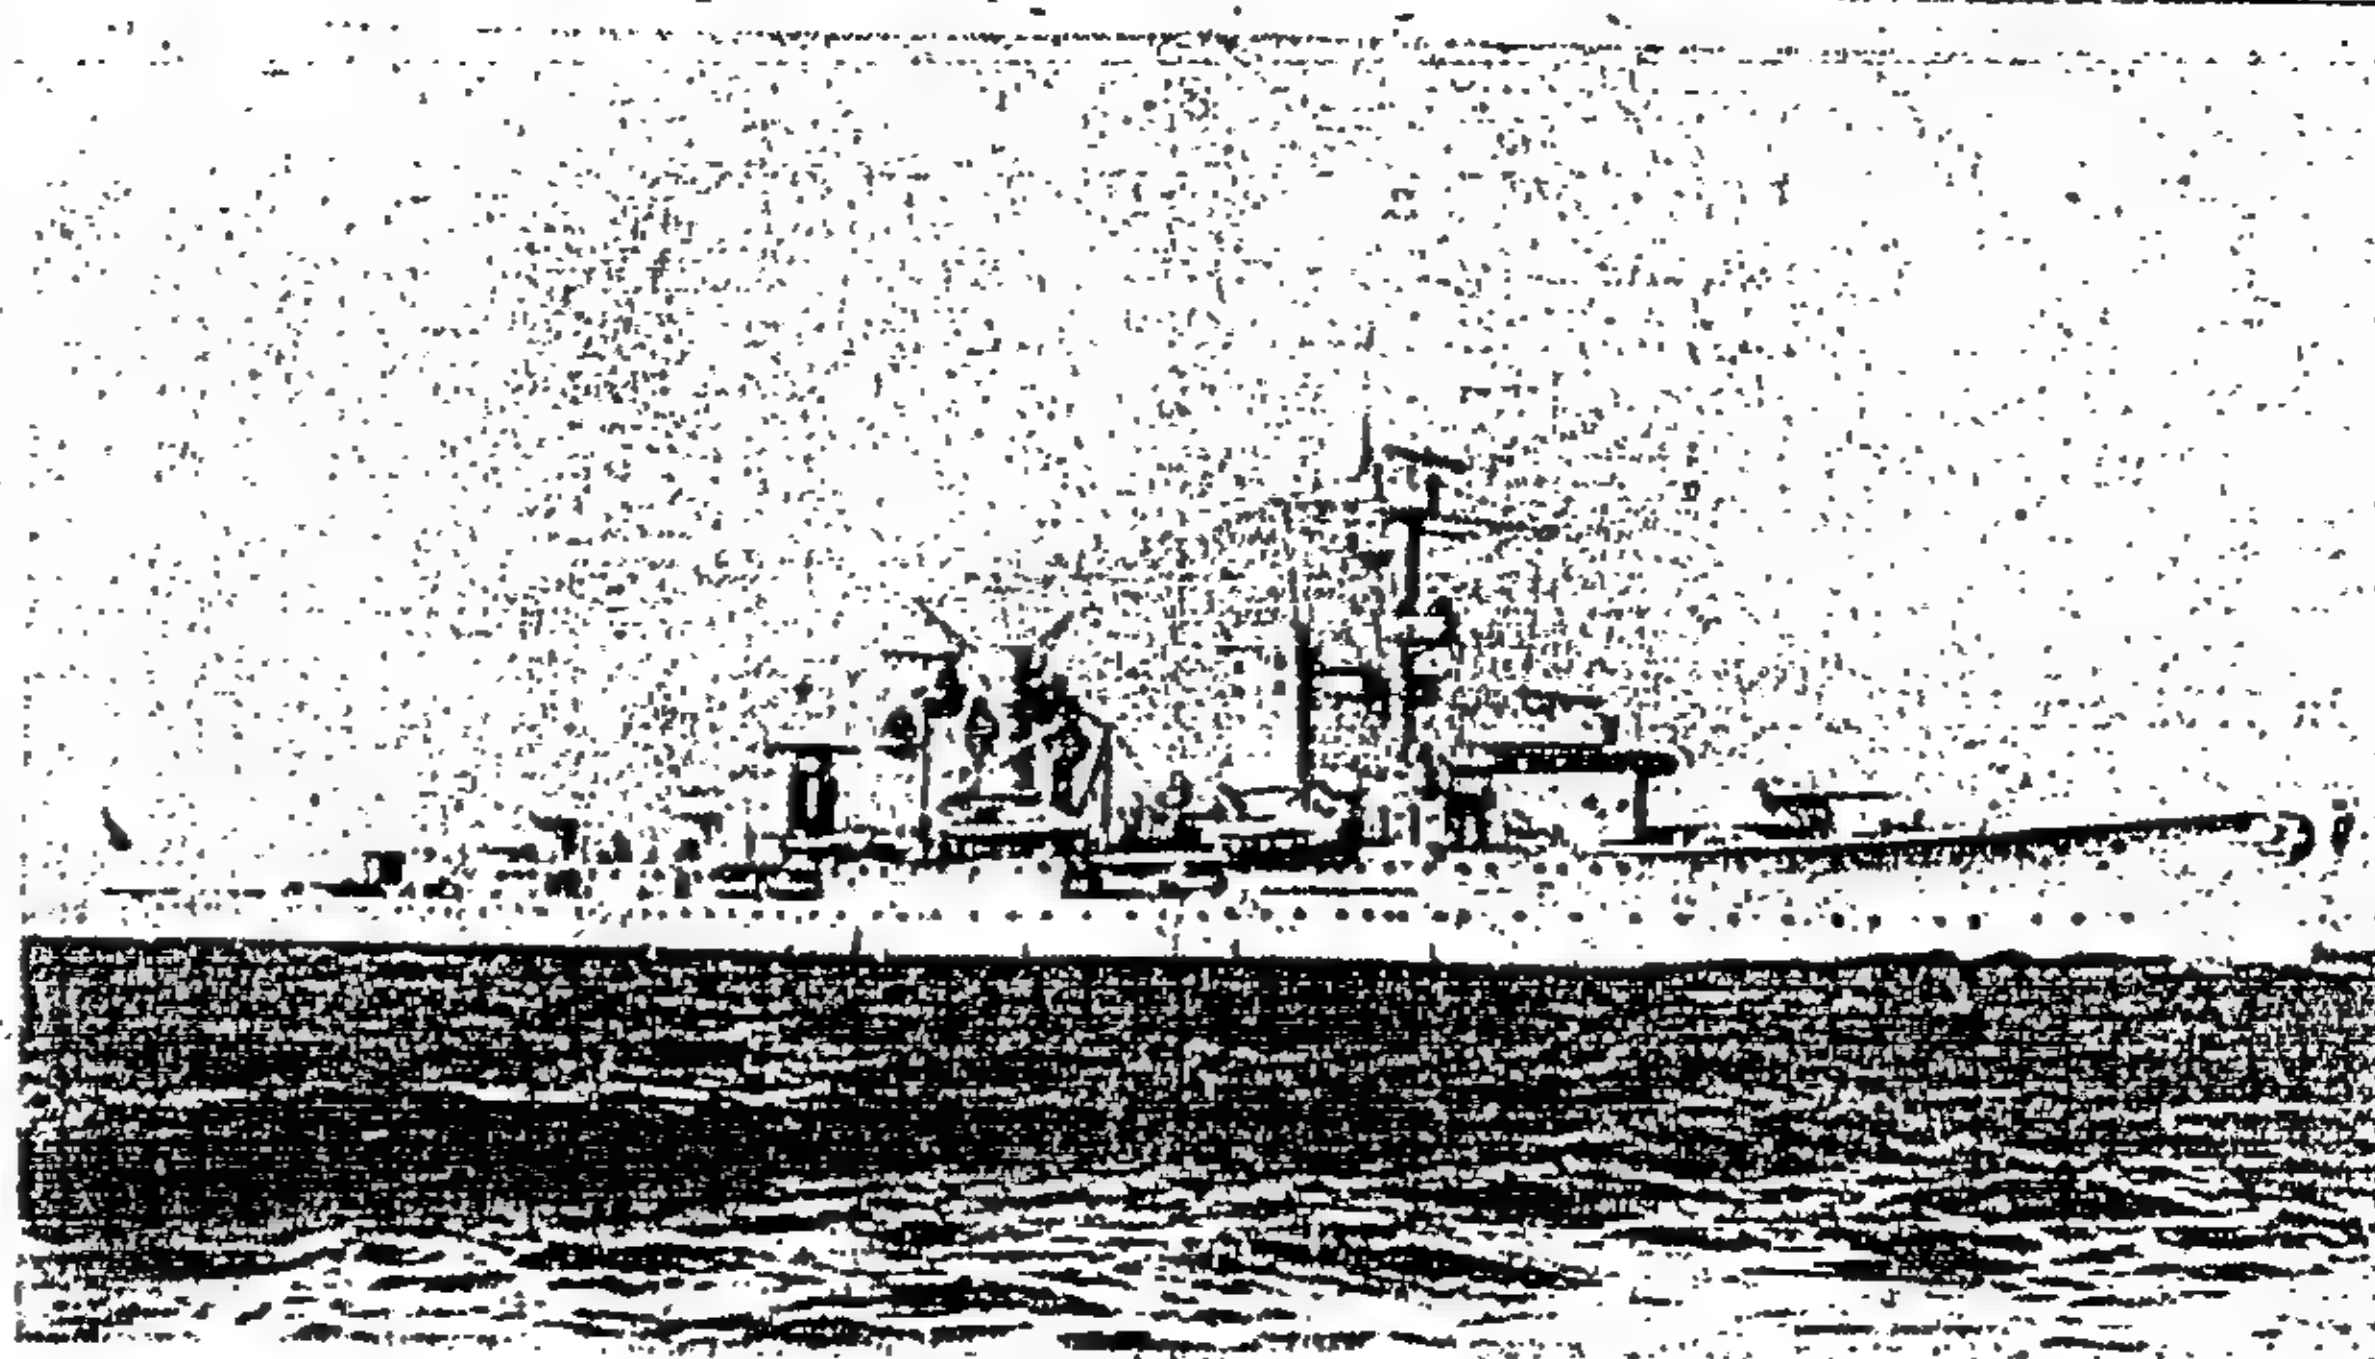

The people have not seen the promised basic dividends during the first six months of the Government's tenure.

Since the province is heavily indebted it is unlikely the much-boasted "social credit plan" will be inaugurated.

Mr. Aberhart regards the discontent at his failure to fulfil his promises due, firstly, to the failure of the Government to pay dividends to the province's workers; secondly, to price-fixing; thirdly, to the continuous flow of credit.

"Stop your confounded grumbling," he says, and recalls that during the election campaign he forecasted it would take eighteen months before his plan could be established.—United Press.

The cruiser Karlsruhe, which arrived in Hongkong this morning, being the first German warship to visit the Colony since the Great War.

GERMAN CRUISER ARRIVES

FIRST TO VISIT IN H.K. SINCE 1914

GUNS THUNDER IN SALUTE

Unusual interest is being attached to the visit to Hongkong of the cruiser Karlsruhe, the first German warship to visit the Colony since the Great War. The cruiser, which is commanded by Captain Siemens, and whose Chief Officer is Commander Rogge (both of whom participated in the Battle of Jutland), steamed into harbour at 10 o'clock this morning, and exchanged salutes with the port.

Shortly after her arrival, the German Consul, Herr H. Gipperich, accompanied by Mr. M. Hess, went on board the cruiser to pay his official call on the Commander, followed by the reception committee of the local German community.

OFFICIAL CALLS

Accompanied by the German Consul, Capt. Siemens, the commander of the Karlsruhe, paid an official call on His Excellency the Governor, Sir Andrew Caldecott, at 10.50 this morning, and subsequently on Commodore C. G. Sedgwick.

At 11.50 a.m., His Excellency the Governor returned the call on board the Karlsruhe, followed by Commodore Sedgwick.

Called on His Excellency the G.O.C., Major-General A. W. Bartholomew, will be exchanged to-morrow morning. An extensive programme, including sports and social functions, has been arranged for the entertainment of the visitors during their stay here.

This afternoon, the Karlsruhe football team will play a practice match against the local team. (Continued on Page 5.)

RAILWAYS BLOCKED

New York, Feb. 6.

With Arctic conditions continuing into the third week, the nation's death-roll is soaring, the cold having resulted in the loss of five hundred lives since January 1. Nearly sixty have died within the past three days.

Railways are experiencing serious dislocation of services, the trains everywhere east of the Rockies being heavily delayed. In some places, the trains have been standing in snow-drifts for days on end.

Twenty-five feet of snow is reported at New Holstein, in Wisconsin, while forty-two degrees below zero have been recorded at Thief River Falls.—Reuter.

The employers' contribution will range between a penny and fourpence.

NO WAR DEBTS TALKS SOUGHT

American Attitude Explained

Washington, Feb. 6.
It is learned that this Administration does not intend to seek a new agreement to collect the War Debts.

The Department of State refused to comment on Mr. Thomas W. Lamont's suggestion, made yesterday, before the Senate Munitions Inquiry, that the re-opening of negotiations might benefit the United States and possibly a lump settlement might be arranged.

However, the Administration intends to adhere to its attitude that obligations incurred in good faith must be paid, it is understood.—United Press.

VINSON PRESENTS FOUR BILLS

CONSTRUCTION COSTS

(Special To "Telegraph")
Washington, Feb. 6.

Representative Carl Vinson, Democrat of Georgia and Chairman of the Committee for Naval Affairs in the House of Representatives, to-day introduced four bills for Naval construction.

- (1) To construct 221,000 tons of Fleet Auxiliaries.
- (2) To modernize eight battle-ships.
- (3) To scrap over-age tonnage.
- (4) To appropriate $8,000,000 to continue the work on twelve vessels already in the course of construction.—United Press.

BACKED BY NAVY

Washington, Feb. 6.

Bills for an extensive Navy modernization programme have been introduced in the House of Representatives by Mr. Carl Vinson.

The Bills, which are backed by the Navy Department, include provision for the construction of 221,000 tons of auxiliary craft.

The introduction of these Bills follows four measures, designed to strengthen the Navy, which were put forward on Tuesday by Senator Park Trammell, chairman of the Senate Naval Committee.—Reuter.

SIROVICH'S CHARGES

Washington, Feb. 6.

A charge that Japanese craft operating off the Alaskan coast, ostensibly for fishing, have been acting for military purposes, was made by Mr. Sirovich, member of the House of Representatives, before the House Merchant Marine Committee to-day.

"These Japanese vessels are taking soundings, exploring water depths, photographing the coast line and spotting possible aeroplane landing fields and submarine bases," said Mr. Sirovich.

Mr. Sirovich further stated that Japan's purpose is to grab Alaska in the event of war, in order to provide food supplies for the Japanese, who are fish-eaters.—Reuter.

BRITISH DOCTOR TELLS OF WAR

WORKING WITHIN THREE MILES OF MAKALE

Desaiye, Feb. 6.

Confirmation of the Ethiopians' claim of a great victory in the Tembien district, where heavy fighting has been proceeding for the past fortnight, was given to-day by Dr. Brophill, an Irish volunteer ambulance worker. After working with his unit three miles from Makale, which was then besieged by the Ethiopians, he reached here after a fifteen days' mule journey.

Dr. Brophill, who is the first white man to return from the northern front, told a vivid story of the difficulties under which the British ambulance workers struggle. They were all in good health, he said, but needed supplies badly.

For the last two months they had had no mail or tobacco, no milk and no salt. They were working at high pressure and dealing with an average of one hundred seriously wounded cases daily.

Almost daily, he declared, his camp was bombed and machine-gunned by Italian aeroplanes.—Reuter.

BRITISH DENIAL

Geneva, Feb. 6.

Reference "to the reckless and unsubstantiated nature" of the Italian charges of a British complicity in manufacturing dum-dum bullets for the Ethiopians, was made to-day in a note sent by the British Government to the League of Nations, categorically denying that any firm in the United Kingdom had supplied such ammunition to the Ethiopian army. Neither dum-dum nor explosive bullets had been sold for military purposes by British firms, the note declared.

The note points out that the strictest control is exercised over all exports, as a result of which the authorities were in a position to see that international regulations and standards were strictly carried out. Rebutting the charges against the English firms, the note mentions that Italian papers charge that Ethiopia had ordered 10,000,000 cartridges, "half of them to be explosive." From this it is suggested by the Italians that the Ethiopians were ordering dum-dum bullets from Britain.

The note explains that the original telegram ordering munitions has been secured. It is found to read "half of this quantity in clips of five." The note adds that the British Government expresses no opinion on the accuracy of the Italian charges that the Ethiopians use illegal ammunition. It is concerned merely with the charges made against British firms.—Reuter.

The dispute between Germany and Poland over the payment for German railway traffic through the Polish Corridor reached a climax to-day when all direct express trains from Danzig to Berlin were held up. Their service has been cancelled, at least temporarily.

Germany owes Poland an accumulated sum of about £2,500,000 and the debt is increasing at the rate of about £500,000 per month.

The German Government has placed the necessary amount to Poland's credit in German marks, but since this money can only be spent in Germany it is not a satisfactory arrangement.

Poland demands payment in foreign exchange, otherwise, in order to avoid further loss, she has threatened to restrict traffic through the Corridor.—Reuter Special.

CHINESE "Y" SPONSORS MASS MARRIAGES

Mass marriage is growing very popular in the large cities throughout China. Its growing popularity is partly due to the keen promotion of such movement by high Chinese Government officials and partly to the abolition of unnecessary formalities and extravagance in Chinese marriage ceremonies.

In response to the movement, the Chinese Y.M.C.A. Hongkong, is conducting its First Mass Marriage ceremony of Saturday, Feb. 15, at 4 p.m. at the Association Auditorium, Bridges Street. Sixteen pairs registered to be married but only eleven pairs were passed by the examination Committee. Among these eleven pairs, there are teachers, merchants, clerks, and workmen.

Before their marriage, it is made compulsory for the prospective brides and bridegrooms to attend a series of lectures and Mrs. P. S. F. Tse will speak to them on the subject. "The Way to Love and Respect after Marriage" on Feb. 8. Prof. T. S. Hsu of the Hongkong University will speak on "The Social Meaning of Marriage" on Feb. 10th. Dr. S. F. Lam of the Bank of China, will speak on "The Significance of Marriage as It Relates to Married Life" on Feb. 11th and Dr. M. W. Shi will speak on "Physiology of Woman" on Feb. 12.

Mr. David W. K. Au, president of the Association, will preside over the meeting and Sir Shousan Chow will officiate at the marriage ceremony on Feb. 12.

FOUR AGES OF MAN—IN RISKS FALL IN RATE FOR BOYS OVER 10

PEOPLE LIVING LONGER;
FEWER BABIES

The highest number of marriages since the war... the lowest birth-rate on record... divorce soaring to a new level... the population still increasing. Men and women snatching another two and a half years from life.

Sufficient material for half a dozen H. G. Wells sociological works lies in the Registrar-General's review of 1933, published recently, a "statistical review" revealing all the wonderful and tragic happenings in the lives of the forty millions of people in England and Wales.

Births, marriages and deaths, plucked from the cold official columns of figures in the medical and civil tables, take on a new significance.

In 1933 our birth-rate fell to 14.4 per 1,000. Only Austria and Sweden have a lower rate. Marriages totalled 318,191, or 11,000 more than in 1932—a record except for the years 1915 and 1919-21 when special conditions prevailed.

There were more divorces than ever—the 1928 record was eclipsed. But the number of those who gave marriage "another chance" also rose.

WIDOWERS LIKE TO RE-MARRY

Here are some other facts about marriage:

At all ages widowers get married in greater proportion than bachelors. Widows, on the other hand, do not enjoy any ascendancy over spinsters until after the age of 35, when they go to the altar in greater numbers.

The first quarter of the year, January-March, is the most unpopular. In the first quarter of 1933 there were, proportionately, fewer weddings than in any year since 1837.

The third quarter—July to September—has, since the beginning of the century, been the favourite period for weddings. Four times as many were celebrated then.

Despite child-bearing risks, married women have a greater chance of survival than the unmarried. At every age up to 60 the risk of dying has been growing less for wives than for spinsters for the past 20 years.

AVERAGE AGE TWO YEARS HIGHER

In the 12 years between 1921 and 1933 English men and women added 2.3 and 2.7 years to their average ages respectively. In the year under review the average age for males was 32.3 and for females 33.9. It is still gradually increasing.

The Four Ages of Man might be the title for the chapter devoted to fatal motor accidents. Summarised, they are:

Age Five to Ten, the age of greatest risk "commencing pedestrian activity uncontrolled by experience";

Age Ten to Fifteen, in which the boys have grown more cautious and reduced the death risk from 132 to 106 per million;

Age Twenty to Twenty-five—"the age of great motor-driving activity not fully restrained by a sense of responsibility. Here the risk has increased from 365 to 393 per million";

Old Age—"With its physical inability to escape traffic dangers."

Curiously enough, the risk of death for women from motor accidents remained unchanged between 1931-33 compared with the previous three years.

There are still nearly a million and three-quarters "surplus" women. An estimated total population of 40,850,000 comprises 19,387,000 males and 20,993,000 females. Since 1931 (the last census), the population increased by 398,000, or 1 per cent.

ROUND THE WORLD AIR PLANS

THREE DAYS INSTEAD OF
TWENTY-ONE

New York, Jan. 15.

With plans agreed upon for establishing the Transatlantic link between Imperial Airways and Pan-American Airways, attention has been turned to completing an air mail service girdling the globe.

The Pan-American company will extend its operations from Honolulu, Hawaii to Auckland, New Zealand, and connect there with a proposed extension of Imperial Airways from Australia.

Already agreements for landing facilities have been signed with the authorities at Kingman Reef, 1,000 miles from Honolulu, and Pago Pago, 1,450 miles further on from there.

The entire flight would be completed in three days, as compared with the best steamship time of between 18 and 21 days.

Success of the project will depend upon the volume of mail from New Zealand and Australia.

Detective Stories

Hue, Indo-China, Jan. 5.

A SALUTE of seven guns at 5.15 a.m. to-day proclaimed the birth of a Crown Prince to the Emperor and Empress of Annam.

This is the first child born to the royal parents, who were married at Hue in 1934.—Reuter.

Annam is a tiny western Eastern State of Indo-China, with a French protectorate. The Emperor Bao-Dai, the "Son of Heaven," is twenty-three.

He has a harem of 200, but also a jazz band. It was formed under the advice of Jack Hylton, who was made honorary musical director of the Court in 1932.

The band plays "A Bungalow, Piccolo and You," "Songs of the Bells," and "Auf Wiedersehen." Bao-Dai has a library of detective stories and a wardrobe of Bond-street suits. On state occasions he surrounds his palace with elephants and sacrifices a bullock, a goat, and a pig in the presence of the mandarins.

STRONG WORDS FOR SERGEANT RULED LAWFUL

Vienna, Jan. 25.

An attempt to curtail the immemorial prerogative of sergeant-majors in the matter of strong language has come to an end with the acquittal of a warrant officer of the Austrian Dragoons.

The sergeant-major was charged with casting reflections on the honour of his men by calling them "a gang of thieves and a pack of rogues." He was provoked by the disappearance of a new pair of riding breeches, which he suspected had been taken by one of his troopers.

The finding of the court was that he had used the words only in a "Pickwickian" or "parade-ground" sense in a moment of justifiable indignation.—United Press.

HONGKONG-SPORE AIR SERVICE EARLY IN MARCH

London, Feb. 6.
Imperial Airways Ltd., expects to open a regular air service between Singapore and Hongkong early in March.

Experimental flights indicate that conditions are extremely favourable and negotiations are progressing in a very amiable manner with regard to the question of crossing Indo-China. The difficulty is that the Chinese Government's embargo on foreign aeroplanes persists. It is understood that American airways recently obtained permission to fly to Macao but no further.—Reuter.

NATIONAL DEFENCE: THE WHOLE TRUTH

WHAT THE COUNTRY IS NOT TOLD

INSIDE STORY OF THE PEACE CRISIS

London, Jan. 16.

THE Morning Post to-day placed before its readers a full review of Britain's position in the present international situation.

The facts are grave and unpalatable, but they have been collected from unimpeachable sources. It should be emphasised that everything now to be put before the public is already well known to our possible enemies. Only the British public remains ignorant of the real state of affairs, and sound judgment of policy cannot be founded on ignorance of the facts.

IN THE NATIONAL INTEREST

While the disclosures may be considered distasteful and startling, they justify neither panic nor pessimism. Indeed, it will be obvious that it is in the national interest that the facts should be properly appreciated and calmly considered—while there is still time for the necessary action—rather than that the country should drift unknowingly into real danger.

Serious attention is directed to the general review of the whole problem which appears below, and to the further and more detailed articles which will appear to-morrow and in subsequent issues.

ABYSSINIA—AND AFTER

"I have seldom spoken with greater regret, for my lips are not yet unsealed. Were these troubles over I would make a case, and I guarantee that not a man would go into the lobby against us."
—MR. BALDWIN, in the House of Commons on December 10, 1935.

Twenty-four hours before Mr. Baldwin made this pronouncement in the House of Commons, the Cabinet had endorsed the ill-fated Hoare-Laval peace terms.

Following are the principal reasons that inspired them to do so. They constitute the "case" referred to by Mr. Baldwin—which, if it had been known at the time, would have given pause to even those who disliked the terms in themselves and were most eager to criticise the Cabinet for endorsing Sir Samuel Hoare's action in putting the terms forward.

The Immediate Danger

Great Britain was—and still is—faced with an international situation of great gravity. That is the considered opinion of those in the best position to judge.

Potential developments in the Abyssinian war constitute the immediate danger, not so much in themselves, but because of their probable sequel.

At no time have the Government doubted the ability of our defence forces to deal with any situation that might arise immediately out of League of Nations action in connection with the Abyssinian conflict; although it has been realised for some time that the brunt of any such action would fall on Great Britain.

But such is the deplorable condition of our defences to-day, and so certain is it that other members of the League would be unwilling or unable to provide effective help, that even the losses such action would inevitably entail—relatively small as they might well be—would leave this country perilously weakened.

It would take her time to repair her losses and to increase her strength; and during that time she would be at the most serious disadvantage should any aggressive Great Power select the moment to make demands, territorial or economic.

We Have Most to Lose

The British Empire has more to lose than any other member of the League, and more to defend. Events of the past few months have made it clear to the Government that, in certain eventualities, this country will be expected to take far greater risks than any other League member. The Government also knows that if the policy which many people—with the highest motives—vigorously advocate to-day is pushed to its logical extreme, the Empire will be placed in a position of acute danger which the public as a whole does not as yet appreciate.

Many of those who believe in collective security through the League agree with those who do not so believe that our defences are inadequate. But the Government know the full truth, which is that our defence forces are quite inadequate, even to meet our League obligations. In fact, it is argued by many competent authorities that membership of the League, with the far-reaching obligations entailed, demands even stronger defences than a policy of isolation or alliances.

Electoral Mandate

These considerations prompted the Government to ask for a mandate at the General Election to increase our defences. But it was realised that it would take time to carry this mandate into effect. Therefore, as the Abyssinian war still continued in spite of League action, and in view of the obvious dangers entailed in applying further sanctions, the Government knew that it was urgent for the future peace of Europe that the conflict should be settled as soon as possible.

That is why the Government originally endorsed the Hoare-Laval peace terms, however much all concerned may have disliked the terms in themselves.

As Sir Samuel Hoare said in his speech in the House of Commons on December 19:

"Neither Mr. Laval nor I, liked many features of them (the peace proposals). But that basis did seem to us to be the only basis upon which it was even remotely likely that we could at least start a peace discussion. . . . So far as I myself was concerned it seemed to me to be so important to start a negotiation, even if it had to be on this basis, that much as I disliked some features of the scheme, I could not withhold my provisional assent. I felt that the issues were so grave and the dangers of the continuance of the war were so serious that it was worth making an attempt, and that it was essential to maintain Anglo-French solidarity. It was in this spirit and in this spirit alone that we agreed to the suggestions. That alone is the explanation and justification of the Paris communique."

France Will Not March

In addition, three further considerations make the position more serious:

The first is that it has become increasingly clear that France will never fight except in face of a threat of invasion of any of her own territories. The armies of France will not march for the League of Nations unless France is directly concerned. France, too, has been seriously embarrassed by the effect of her policy at Geneva on her relations with Italy, whom she regards as an indispensable ally.

The second is that Germany, with whom Great Britain had hoped to make further pacts and arrangements, has made it clear that she will do nothing at the moment—partly, because she wishes to wait and see who comes best out of the present crisis, and partly because she believes that Britain's defences are so weak, and will take so long to repair, that she need be in no hurry to enter into any pacts with her.

The third is that while Italy became increasingly truculent, other members of the League did not become proportionately more helpful. Just as France was becoming more and more reluctant to be involved, other nations were making it clear that the prospect of effective collective support was an illusion. Moreover, with the progress of the Abyssinian war, China, Japan and Egypt began to show signs of trouble.

Thus the British Government found themselves without the essentials either for a full-blooded peace or a full-blooded

They Said—

Only three of our capital ships to-day are post-war. The design of the remainder dates from the days before aircraft attack had to be taken into account, and many of our cruisers are obsolete as regards modern requirements. Mr. Baldwin, in his Broadcast speech on October 25, 1935.

Throughout all these difficult and anxious weeks it has been made abundantly clear to us that we have been gravely handicapped by the fact—the knowledge of which is widespread upon the Continent—that our defensive forces have fallen to a dangerously low level.

Mr. N. Chamberlain, at Kelso, September 21, 1935.

The worship of force in many parts of the world compels us, in the interests of world peace, to look to our own defences. Sir Samuel Hoare, Hansard, October 22, 1935.

Unless this great country of ours possesses a Navy that is supreme—and if it is materially equal, it will be supreme—no shall, I believe, lose this great Empire of ours, and we will not be able to fulfil the great obligations we have undertaken all over the world.

Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger Keyes, Authors' Club dinner, December 2, 1935.

A fleet of British ships of war are the best negotiators in Europe. They always speak to be understood, and generally gain their point. Their arguments carry conviction to the breasts of our enemies.

Nelson to Lady Hamilton in a letter written from the St. George, March 13, 14, and 16, 1801.

policy, and it became all the more imperative to obtain peace outside the League.

"Not a Ship, Not a Man"

Sir Samuel Hoare obviously had these considerations in mind when, in the speech referred to, he stated:

"We alone have taken these military precautions. There is the British Fleet in the Mediterranean, there are the British reinforcements in Egypt, in Malta and Aden. Not a ship, not a machine, not a man has been moved by any other member State. Now that negotiations have failed, we must have something more than these general protestations of loyalty to the League. I say that again, not because we, the British Empire, are afraid of an Italian attack upon us, but because without this active co-operation collective security is impossible, and the League will dissolve. I say it further, because I believe that without this active co-operation it will be impossible to have more than an 'unsatisfactory peace'. You cannot have a 100 per cent. peace if you have only a 5 per cent. co-operation that goes to the making of it."

"It is a choice between the full co-operation of all the member States and the kind of unsatisfactory compromise that was contemplated in the suggestions which Mr. Laval and I put up."

To-day Great Britain stands almost alone, with no friends on whom she can count, and with little possibility of making any. A year ago she could have counted on the support of France and Italy in any threat to the peace of Europe.

To-day, owing to the weakness of her armed forces, her policy at Geneva—though inspired by the highest motives—has, while failing to stop or to end the war, antagonised Italy and confused Anglo-French relations.

Alienating Allies

If this policy is pushed to extremes, the support of France will be jeopardised, and Italy will become an open and active antagonist. Whatever the outcome—and the possibility is that Italy would collapse into chaos or Communism—the future support of a powerful ally with two million bayonets would be lost beyond recall. The latter event, indeed, is now almost inevitable, even if an embarrassing and expensive war in the Mediterranean is avoided.

Unless, therefore, immediate steps are taken to put Britain's defences in order, she will be placed in the weakest possible position to refuse the demands which aggressive Powers are likely to make in the future.

All this was realised only too clearly by the Government, and they hoped that, if the Hoare-Laval Peace Terms resulted in the settlement of the Abyssinian war, a source of future trouble would be stopped and they would have time to carry out their defence plans.

But when the nature of these terms became known, there was a

GLARING DEFECTS OF BRITAIN'S DEFENCE

FACTS ABOUT THE FLEET:
SHORTAGE OF SHELLS

The following summary shows the position in which Great Britain has been placed by the neglect of her defences in recent years.

In succeeding issues of the Morning Post the defects epitomised below will be subjected to detailed examination.

NAVY

1. Since the Great War stocks of ammunition have been allowed to fall far below the usual reserve. As a result, when the Fleet went to the Mediterranean, there was barely enough ammunition available.
2. Arrangements for rapid expansion of manufacture of war material by private firms have not been made, and State arsenals are incapable of meeting our full needs.
3. Naval personnel is seriously inadequate, and it will take some years properly to train the additional personnel required. The present shortage is imposing an unfair strain on the existing personnel.
4. We have not sufficient force to safeguard our food supply in the event of war with a Great Power possessing a large and efficient force of submarines or commerce raiders. Both Germany and Italy have large forces of efficient submarines and other craft suitable for attacking trade routes.
5. Our cruiser and destroyer strength is far below what is necessary. Our battleships are mainly obsolete or obsolescent.
6. Certain technical considerations are liable to entail a dangerous delay in the building of the new ships which are so urgently needed.
7. Our oil supply, in the event of war, would be in jeopardy.

ARMY

1. To-day the Regular and Territorial armies and reserves, total 461,463 as compared with 697,119 in 1913—a reduction of 245,656.
2. Apart from the Army reserve, which would be absorbed on mobilisation in bringing the Regular Army up to war strength, the only reserve for the Regular Army is the Territorial Army. Since the War, even the Militia, which was the reserve for the Regular Army, has been abolished.
3. The reserves of stores and equipment are lower than they sudden and perhaps unprecedented wave of hysterical propaganda against them. For a time a large section of the public, led by most of the Press (even those organs that had previously given blind support to the Government) and by the League of Nations Union, threw aside restraint and united in an emotional storm of disapproval. Practical considerations were ignored; even the terms themselves were stifled at birth without calm consideration. Few stopped to consider that the Government might have excellent reasons, unknown to the public, for endorsing Sir Samuel Hoare's action in putting these terms forward.

Behind the Scenes

In this wave of excited feeling, Mr. Baldwin's famous remark, which is quoted at the head of this article, was momentarily forgotten. Frantic political manoeuvres went on behind the scenes. Sir Samuel Hoare, owing to an accident, was delayed in his return to England, which gave his opponents a clear start. As a result, it soon became clear to the Government that they were in serious danger of defeat.

Perhaps the Government made a mistake in not taking the public more into their confidence, in which case, no doubt, much of the criticism would have been withdrawn. But whatever the reasons that prompted the Prime Minister to keep his lips sealed, it is clear that it would not have been in the national interest to risk a defeat at a time of such crisis.

It is equally clear that criticism of any errors in the past is quite unprofitable. The first essential is to correct the widespread public misunderstanding that deflected the Government from their course of action and has resulted only in the most dangerous delay.

The second is to give the Government the fullest support in any defence measures they may take. The summary which appears in this column gives an indication of the deficiencies that have to be made good before Britain once again can take an effective part in securing the peace of the world. These deficiencies will be dealt with in detail in succeeding articles in the Morning Post.

Taken in conjunction with the facts stated above, they reveal for the first time the inner history of one of the most critical episodes in recent times.

4. All the standard tanks are out and obsolete.
5. Special tanks to co-operate with infantry are not yet available, nor are anti-tank guns which are needed for both local and "area" defence.
6. Cavalry and infantry are using out-of-date and unreliable automatics, judged by modern standards.
7. Under the new scheme, the Army lacks a considerable number of machine-guns.
8. With the increasing mechanisation of the Army, it is more dependent than ever before on imported oil. (See Naval position.)
9. There is a very serious deficiency of modern anti-aircraft guns.
10. The Regular Army is deficient in anti-aircraft units.
11. There is little or no provision for the anti-aircraft defence of anywhere in the country except Greater London.
12. The Territorial Army, which is solely responsible for Home anti-aircraft defence (ground troops), is seriously under strength. It also lacks the latest scientific equipment.

AIR FORCE

1. Our strength has been allowed to fall far below danger point. At present rates of expansion, Germany will have 2,600 first-line aeroplanes by March, 1937, while Great Britain, with heavy overseas commitments, will have at most 2,400 machines, of which only 1,600 will be available for home defence.
2. The Fleet Air Arm is inadequate.
3. Other countries have already arranged greater expansion facilities than this country.
4. The number of strategic aerodromes in the Empire is inadequate owing to the small scale of our subsidised commercial flying.
5. Our heavy bombers are insufficient in numbers relative to other types.
6. Our provision for stimulating and maintaining technical development is inadequate.

Grave of British Hero In Ethiopia

Adigrat, Jan. 26.

The grave of a British hero who died during the Napier campaign in Ethiopia is being tended near here to-day by the Italian Army.

It is the final resting place of Colonel A. R. Dunn, who had been awarded the Victoria Cross for valour on the field of battle. Around him are buried five Italian soldiers and three Italian officers but this humble graveyard in the shadows of the mishapen Amba Matara mountain peak is called the "English Cemetery."

Only twenty yards from the dusty road that joins Adigrat and Senafe, the tomb-stones are constantly being discoloured by the red powder that is swirled up by passing trucks and marching soldiers en route to the Makale-Dolo front, but every morning a soldier of the Italian Engineering Corps brushes the dust from off the crosses and stones.

Flowers On Grave

When I arrived there in the afternoon, writes a United Press correspondent, some red mountain flowers had just been placed on Colonel Dunn's grave. They may have been put there by some English correspondent who had passed by, but it is more probable that this act of memory was performed by an Italian soldier as the cemetery is now hidden from view by great piles of supplies, a wooden store-house and a hospital tent.

The inscription on the marble slab that is sunken into the mound of the middle grave reads: "In Memory of A. R. Dunn, V.C., Col. 33rd R. who died at Senafe on January 25, 1868." This stone I was told, was erected by men of an Askari column under command of Italian officers in 1916. The stone wall around the cemetery was put up by the Italians in 1927. The same year an iron cross was also placed there.

Colonel Dunn, who died at Senafe of illness, was a member of the famous 33rd Regiment which stormed Magdala in April, 1868. The regiment was marching into the village when a single shot was heard. It was the Emperor, Theodore of the Ethiopians, who had just blown out his brains with a silver-mounted pistol which had been given him by Queen Victoria.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

MARKET IRREGULAR YESTERDAY

New York, Feb. 6. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz Dow Jones Summary of yesterday's market: The market to-day was active, but irregular, owing to profits taking late in the session after the whole market had, early on, reached a new ground since 1931. Gains were held until near the close. Investment buying sent American Telephone & Telegraph shares to a new high level since 1931. Motors were generally mixed. Chrysler stocks recovered sharply after a dividend declaration, but these issues later declined. Railroad, utility and aircraft securities dipped, while farm implement, communication, railroad equipment, coal and amusement securities advanced. Silver, copper and gold stocks were quiet. Stocks on the Curb Exchange were irregular and quiet. Utility issues were irregularly higher. Selective industrial issues were firm, but mining shares were mixed. The market for bonds was upward, led by railroad and communication issues.

S. C. & F. New York office cables: Stocks: This market maintained a firm tone and traders continue bullish. Woolworth sales were off .09 per cent. during January. The Alaska Juneau Mining Company earned $200,000 in January, against $120,000 during the corresponding month of last year. The value of stocks listed on the Stock Exchange totalled $50,164,000 on February 1st, compared with $49,945,000,000 on December 31st.

Cotton: Opposition is developing to the selling plan of Government stocks. A private bureau estimates 17 per cent. increase in acreage is contemplated. Continued irregularity is probable. Wheat: The possibility of damage to the winter crop owing to the extreme and prolonged cold weather is ignored. The Canadian surplus question dominates the market. Rubber: Broad buying was resumed and all "spot" offerings were taken here. The market is firm.

GERMAN CRUISER

match, after which, at 5.30, a reception party will be held at the German Club for 120 of the visitors. The party will later be entertained to supper by 25 local German families.

SPORTS EVENTS

At 8.30 a.m. to-morrow, a party of 40 will proceed to Canton by train, returning on Sunday evening or Monday afternoon. In the afternoon, a party of 120 will engage in walks around the Colony and sea bathing, while tennis and a football match against H.M.S. Dorsetshire will be played. The visitors will also participate in the cruiser race organised by the Royal Hongkong Yacht Club in the afternoon and on Sunday. In the evening, the visitors will hold a supper party on board the cruiser.

From 9 to 10 a.m. on Sunday, about 200 to 300 men of the cruiser will take part in the Church Parade service at Union Church where the Reverend Canon, who will deliver the sermon. After the service, wreaths will be laid on the graves of the crew of former German squadron. Sightseeing in town will then be inaugurated by the visitors, and at 12 noon the party will return on board. At 2.30 p.m., the visitors will take walks and trips round the Colony as well as play tennis, and in the evening about 120 of the visitors will be entertained to a Chinese dinner at the German Club. At 8 p.m., six ward-room officers, six cadets and six warrant officers of the cruiser will be entertained to an informal dinner and a cinema show by H.M.S. Dorsetshire. Three of them will come with the captain.

SHOOTING MATCH

On Monday, the visitors will take part in a rifle shooting match at Stonecutters, and in the evening they will be entertained to dinner by Commodore Sedgwick.

An excursion to Shing Mun Dam will be made by the visitors on Tuesday, and on Wednesday from 9 a.m. to noon, cadets of the Karlsruhe will visit H.M.S. Dorsetshire, in three parties. An official call will be paid on H.M.S. Dorsetshire, while certain members of the vessel will participate in a team race organised by the Royal Hongkong Yacht Club. From 2.30 to 5.30 p.m., the visitors will give a children's party on board the cruiser, and in the evening, at 7.30, a supper party will be held on board the German Club for about 120 persons who are invited.

The visitors will hold a reception on board the Karlsruhe on Thursday, after which H.M.S. Tamar will give a dinner party for warrant officers of the Karlsruhe. At 9 p.m., an "At Home" will be held in the Chief and Officers' Messes. Rooms, music to be supplied by the orchestra of H.M.S. Dorsetshire.

OTHER ENTERTAINMENTS

The Karlsruhe will be thrown open to visitors from 4 to 6 p.m. on Friday. Wardroom officers of H.M.S. Dorsetshire will pay a call on the cruiser, and among other functions arranged for the visitors on this day will be a sailing match between the Karlsruhe and H.M.S. Dorsetshire, a supper party for about 120 men, and a musical evening at Helene May Institute.

On Saturday, from 3 to 5 p.m., the Karlsruhe will again be open to visitors, and official calls will be returned. In the morning, the cruiser will play a football game with the Canton and Hongkong Germans, and later in the day, against a team from H.M.S. Dorsetshire. Athletic sports will also be held.

From 3 to 6 p.m. on Sunday, the Karlsruhe will again be open to visitors. In the evening, at 8 p.m., a farwell party to the visitors will take place at the German Club.

FORMER KARLSRUHE

Very different from her fore-runners is the Karlsruhe. They were put at a great disadvantage at the Battle of the Falklands because of their lack of speed. Admiral Sturdee's battleships being able to attain some 25 knots to the German cruisers' 18 or 19 knots. To-day the liners Gneisenau and Scharnhorst would be able to hold their own if not get away from ships of only that speed. While the warship Karlsruhe speed is disclosed at 32 knots, her top speed is no doubt considerably above that figure.

There have been former vessels of the German Navy called Karlsruhe, the first of which was not that of the cruiser Gneisenau and Scharnhorst, both of which sank with their flags still flying after a disastrous battering.

The first Karlsruhe was a light cruiser of 4,820 tons and had a speed of 28 knots. After sinking 13 British merchant ships in the Atlantic during the early part of the war, however, she sank as the result of an explosion after only a little over three months active service, and less than two years of service in the German Navy.

The second Karlsruhe had a somewhat longer life, but a no less unhappy one, she being one of those vessels scuttled at Scapa Flow in 1919 after the surrender of the High Seas Fleet.

MODERN SHIP

To-day's visitor is superior to both her sisters in speed and power. She was launched in 1927 and entered the German Navy in November 1929. The vessel is of 6,000 tons, is 124 ft. long, and 50 feet broad; her speed is 32 knots, and her armaments consist of nine six-inch guns, four 5.4-inch guns (anti-aircraft), 18 machine guns, and 12 19.7-inch torpedo tubes. Triples. Her crew consists of 662 officers and men, but on this tour there are some 100 cadets aboard who are gaining practical experience on a warship at sea.

The voyage of the Karlsruhe began from Kiel on October 21, 1935, and the ports of call have included Santa Cruz, Sao Tome, Lobito, Durban, Port Victoria, Batavia, Hoio, and now Hongkong.

From here she will probably visit Canton and then proceed to Nagasaki, Yokohama, Dairen, San Diego, Panama, Saint Thomas, Porto Velho, and then Germany.

In her capacity as training ship for the new German Navy the Karlsruhe has already made four voyages abroad, one to South Africa and South America, one to North and South America, a trip round the world, and a trip round the Cape to North America.

An unusual feature about the voyages of the Karlsruhe is the amount of cargo which the warship carries. Immense quantities of food-stuffs have been stored on board in order that as little as possible will have to be purchased while the ship is abroad, thus conserving German Marks, only a limited number of which can be spent outside Germany.

The two main objects of the cruise are to show the flag in foreign waters, and to train the cadets, who, under the ship's Commander, Captain L. Siemens, must learn sufficient to be able to pass examinations to become officers when they reach Germany again in June this year.

OH DEAR! OH LORD! I'VE DONE IT AGAIN

slow bowler to use in a case like this to tempt the batsmen.

LAST SATURDAY

I have not yet referred to the non-League game between the H.K.C.C. and the Civil Service, which was interesting apart from the actual play, from the fact that the improvement shown by the Civil Service recently was maintained, though I freely admit that the absence of T. A. Pearce and E. R. Duckitt not only weakened the Club batting—which did not matter—but also the Club bowling, which did matter very much.

I am told on good authority that Perry and Richardson battled very evenly. The latter batsmen all had a go in the attempt to score rapidly, and a declaration at 177 for eight wickets was quite credible. I hear Growler was making the ball turn tremendously, and kept a bit too slow for him.

For the Club, Owen Hughes who came in first with T. E. Pearce was splendidly helped by Baker in the slips off McEellan before he had really got going but Pearce and Marshall put things right and Baines and Hayward were going strong at the end, when a failure on either part might have given the C.S.C.C. some chance of a win—or so it was hoped by the fielding side.

But actually the Club have batting all through and even with Alice Pearce and Duckitt off they did not have to call on J. Stein who is a useful forcing bat.

Although his figures were not very startling, I gather Baker bowled very well indeed for the Civil Service, and he did them a great service when he yanked Gillespie's leg stump just as he was looking set for one of his big hitting innings.

Wallington who came down to score for the Club played for the C.S. who were a man short and judging by his good fielding it would seem possible that he may yet be able to resume his place in the side.

JUNIOR GAMES

The Navy were not at full strength when their second eleven played Recto and a rather exciting draw was the result. On the Club ground the wicket was taking a lot of spin and the C.S.C.C. Juniors gave the Club second a scare as when thirteen runs were wanted only two wickets were left. Stein however, who seemed to me to be a bat far above second eleven form hit excellently, hooking everything short of a length just where it should go, and very hard. I don't know how he would shape against first League bowling but I should rather like to see Fox, whose faster deliveries were kicking hastily, bowled for the Club, spinning the ball a lot from the off, while for the Civil Service, Ling certainly deserved more than the one wicket he got. Westlake made a very fine catch running to gully from slip to put Armstrong out.

TO-MORROW'S GAMES

In the Senior Division there are two League games as the C.S.C.C. journey to Sookunpoo to take on the Army. Although the latter are without Garthwaite, Williams and Walsh, the visitors will have to go all out to win. I rather expect a draw. The C.C.G. first team, according to their card is at home to the C.C.C. while the C.C.C.'s card states that they are at home to the K.C.C. I will give it up! Anyway they and their seconds have a League encounter, wherever it may be. If the K.C.C. can win outright they will be adding a deal of interest to the fight for the Shield.

The Club are at home to the Navy in a non-League game and I gather that it is a combination of the first and second elevens on each side, as G. A. Stewart is getting married and two teams from the Club are not available. My heartiest congratulations and good wishes, and I know, these of all cricketers go to him and his Bride.

JUNIOR DIVISION

Police and C.S.C.C. are at home to Army Service Corps and R.A.M.C. respectively, while I have already mentioned the K.C.C.-Craigengower game. In non-League games I only know of the I.R.C. who are at home to the Recto.

21 YEARS AGO

Extracts From the "Telegraph" Files

The following extracts are from the Hongkong Telegraph for the week ended February 6, 1915.

The rate of the dollar on demand was 1s. 9.3/16d.

The wedding took place at St. John's Cathedral of Mr. G. A. Dutton and Miss G. E. S. Callaghan.

The Italian Opera Company, managed by Mr. A. Carpi, commences its season at the Theatre Royal.

"TELEGRAPH" ART SUPPLEMENT

To-morrow's Picture Features

Numerous illustrations of topical interest will appear in to-morrow's issue of the Hongkong Telegraph.

There will be a series of pictures of scenes from "Trouble in Toyland," whilst groups will include Wah Yan College junior basketball teams, students of Ricci Hall, members of the Chinese Club, committee members of the Sze Yap Chamber of Commerce, the presentation of diplomas to nurses of the Tung Wah Hospital, and the Hongkong University Union members with H.E. the Governor.

There will also be a portrait of Colonel G. Davis of the Salvation Army, and a group taken at the wedding of Mr. Koo Ngoc and Miss Ng Kwai-pun.

The Supplement will also include the popular entertainment and feature pages.

At the annual meeting of shareholders of the Union Church, Mr. J. Wattle was appointed Hon. Treasurer, whilst the committee included Messrs. J. W. C. Bonnar, J. L. McPherson, P. D. Wilson and the Rev. H. R. Wells.

Mr. D. W. Tratman was appointed District Officer of the New Territories, and Mr. G. R. Sayer was appointed Deputy Official Receiver.

Challenge Cup (13 Miles) and it will be recalled that last year Diana Bay dead-headed with King's Warden after one of the most exciting finishes of the Annual Meeting. The owners brotherly decided to share the stake money of first and second places, and each had a leg on the Cup, which must be won two years consecutively by a pony or ponies of the same owner.

PREVIOUS DEAD-HEAT
I was told that there was a dead heat on this long distance race some 15 years ago and in perusing the files of the Hongkong Telegraph, I found that in 1921 the Judges could not separate Caulfield, ridden by the late Mr. John Johnstone, a former partner of Messrs. James Matheson & Co., and Allied King, owned by Mr. G. H. Potts with Mr. "Billy" Hill up. Caulfield eventually won the classic event by half-a-length after a run off on the last day of the Meeting. However, it is interesting to know that Diana Bay has not been entered for the Challenge Cup and it is obvious that the Liberty Day will be sent out to secure the other part of the leg when the Cup (which is valued one hundred guineas) will become the property of Mr. L. Dunbar.

It is not possible at this juncture to make a tip for the Ladies Purse as there are no less than 20 speedy merchants in the race. Every owner is out to please his jockey. Mr. Dunbar has four nominations namely, Diana Bay, Mistake Bay, Oak Bay and Pontiac Bay, and the stable "Dynasty" has the same number in Heiman, King's Bounty, King's Fancy and King's Warden. I hear on good authority that all the Shanghai married jockeys, namely, C. Encarnacion, D. S. Li and T. L. Wong, have given an undertaking not to accept the best mounts so that Messrs. "Penny" Marshall and "Nicky" Needham shine in the Ladies' Purse. Hongkong "henpecked" jockeys are calling a vote.

long time and only recently returned from Macao. He is now O.K., but is not the same Iron Grey at this time last year.

NEW SUBS
Of the new Sub-Griffs, there has been no sensational gallop but Mr. J. Wattle has the rail fairs on Sunday morning that The Gorilla was a fine galloper. In company with 7th of September, those two mokes went over the Valley Stakes' distance and they raced home together in a very useful time of 1:38.4/5. Their last quarter time in 40.2/5 seconds and the last half-mile was negotiated in 1:03.3/5.

The same morning, Mr. T. L. Wong was trying Mountain View and Mr. S. Y. Liang on Wild Cat over the distance of 1 1/4 miles but they were simply out for slow work. Gold Sovereign followed the same route in 2:16.1/5, and Mr. G. Roza pushed the animal in the last quarter, doing it in 29.4/5 seconds.

Although the whole time for the mile was slow, namely, 2:23.2/5, I like Rose Evelyn's mile and this mare will have Mr. Encarnacion as her chaperon at the coming Carnival. The same jockey tried Blue Ribbon and Public Hero No. 1 last Wednesday and both ponies cantered the mile in very slow time.

Mr. V. V. Needa took Hellbender over a gallop over a mile and the pony finished gamely. Ballos, who was under blankets, cantered a mile and a quarter with Mr. Needa up and this is a good sign. It is equivalent in saying that he likes the animal.

Sir Victor Sassoon has no Subs. in his stable, and under the circumstances Mr. Needa will have a lot of Sub-Griffs at his disposal. Mr. Donald Black has been booked to steer Celebration Time, Lancashire Loom, Strathalan and Stop-watch and all will give him a good ride at the Annual Meeting. Mr. P. Boker will wear Ulster's colours on Sunday and this pony is coming on nicely. Supercharge is now O.K., and I understand Mr. Dietz will ride him.

SCRATCHING never gives a DOG relief

—but it often leads to Eczema!

A word of warning if your dog is scratching. He is feeling the terrible itching sensation under his skin which all dogs experience when their blood is impure. Scratching won't give him relief—but it might easily lead to eczema. First a bare patch in his coat and then... trouble!

Eczema is painful, and difficult to cure, so stop your dog scratching now by purifying his blood with a course of Bob Martin's Tasteless Condition Powders. Your dog's skin is non-porous and he cannot perspire. He is denied that easy means of getting rid of impurities from his blood, but because he lives with you and eats prepared foods his blood is continually being loaded with impurities. To put it bluntly, unless you provide your dog with a blood corrective regularly you neglect him.

STORM OVER BRITAIN

One looks out upon a dark sea of doubt towards Europe. The only glimpse of something other than the monotonous heave of recurring waves of fear comes with the flash of a breaking crest, some crisis or other. There is an ominous muttering behind the clouds. They heard it on Wednesday in the House of Commons. Two veteran statesmen of different temperaments and of opposite politics, Mr. George Lansbury and Mr. David Lloyd George, warned the Government of the nearness of the storm about the coasts of England, and of the danger it might bring to the whole of the Empire. They called for quick conference, for an assembly of nations to debate the economic complexities which have given rise to the crisis. They were answered briefly. A Government spokesman declared that not a bit of the Empire's soil would be sacrificed nor an ounce of its wealth contributed to pacify any belligerent—this is our interpretation—and that an international conference at this stage was too risky a thing to attempt. If it failed it would heighten the tension and accentuate the danger of a clash. The motion of the veteran Labourite, Lansbury, and the robust war-time Prime Minister, Lloyd George, was lost. The Government presently announced that Great Britain's new defence programme was virtually completed. Within a few hours, a morning newspaper announced the accomplishment of a Russo-Rumanian treaty of mutual assistance, within the framework of the League Covenant, and built along the same lines as the Franco-Russian pact. That was a lightning flash. Presently from the newspapers of Germany, and perhaps Poland, will come the mutter of thunder; for these pacts give Germany a feeling of insecurity, as though she were being hemmed in by unseen but none the less menacing forces. There is no break yet in the storm-wrack. No light shines through. At this time of stress, the people of our Empire require a leader of tremendous vitality, courage and diplomacy. The world needs such a man. King Carol's may have been a small voice in the storm, but his words also may have been inspired. "I am confident his experience will prove most valuable in his

The United States Wonders . . .

A MAN to Beat ROOSEVELT this Year?

By
Raymond Swing

Mr. Raymond Swing is well known in Britain for his brilliant and lucid exposition of American affairs, relayed weekly by wireless from New York for British listeners. For ten years until recently he was London correspondent of the "Philadelphia Public Ledger."

PRESIDENT Roosevelt can be thankful that the election of 1936 is not to be decided by the business men of the United States. Wherever they meet, he and his policies are denounced with an intolerance beyond the normal heat of politics, and certainly beyond the pale of balanced judgment.

The bitterness of business men—one could say of the upper middle class—against Roosevelt is an outstanding phenomenon of American politics to-day. It is irrational enough to call for a psychological explanation. It may be due to the fact that less than four years ago, during the bank crisis of 1933, these same persons were as ecstatic about Roosevelt as they are now resentful.

These business men and their circle cannot be won over by Roosevelt this year.

NOTES OF THE DAY

TRADE RECOVERY

The fact that Mr. Cordell Hull, U.S. Secretary of State, and Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador, are at present engaged in a series of conferences, aiming at the promotion of international trade recovery, encourages the hope that ere long some definite move will be made towards this end. At the moment, neither Britain nor the United States have put forward any concrete proposals, but a most useful purpose should be served by exploratory talks of this character, which are a pre-requisite of any agreement which may eventually be achieved. At the moment, there does not seem much likelihood that another World Economic Conference would prove productive of results. For the time being, therefore, the best method of approach would appear to lie in the direction of bilateral talks having as their object the conclusion of new trade agreements between various nations. Britain herself has met with a considerable measure of success along these lines, whilst the recently-concluded agreement between the United States and Canada also points to the possibilities, within certain limits, of this procedure. Without question, a comprehensive commercial treaty between Britain and the United States, supplemented by an agreement on monetary matters, would do much to restore world trade. It is clear that progress towards this end will continue to be relatively slow so long as excessive restrictions are permitted to obstruct the flow of commerce.

relations with all men and all countries," Carol of Rumania said of England's King. Of this we, too, are certain. It is our earnest hope that, like his illustrious grand-father, he may come to be known to posterity as "Edward the Peace-Maker."

IT is his fortune that they comprise a small minority. Also it is his fortune that their attitude has inspired most of the political arguments now being put forward by the Republicans. They are so preoccupied in tearing to pieces the fallen angel that they are offering no alternative policy beyond a return to nineteenth-century laissez-faire.

And thus the issue, as they present it to the public, is Roosevelt versus himself, and this, I repeat, is his fortune.

Outside business circles the vote on this issue, if it were taken to-day, would slightly favour the President. He has not known only a few facts about the New Deal, hence is no reactionary. He has opposed others, hence he is independent. He is a student, and more human and humane than either Landon or Knox.

Business men accept him on faith as one of themselves. The East would hardly embrace him unless he promised to forget his temperance creeds if elected.

Frank Knox, of Illinois, is runner-up to Borah and Landon. He is publisher of the Chicago Daily News, like Borah intent on Borah might accept him, the eastern Republicans might reluctantly adopt him. But as an opponent Roosevelt would welcome him. He is a half-way New Dealer.

At the moment the man in the White House looks out on its green lawns, smiling with his characteristic optimism, but wishing that the election might be held now.

defeated himself in the affection and respect of the great mass of the people, who still like him for trying, while they do not approve of all he tried. And this year, unless the Republicans raise up a candidate, offering an appealing and constructive alternative to the New Deal, or unless the President himself commits some ruinous blunder, he will not be defeated.

The one Republican who might equal Roosevelt in arousing popular enthusiasm is the one most like him in his mild radicalism, Senator Borah, of Idaho. He is like him, too, in not being financially orthodox.

He is a "silver" Senator, hence a currency tinkerer. Still worse, he is flirting with supporters of the Townsend Plan (a rotating old-age pension scheme giving every man and woman over 65 the sum of £40 a month, which they must spend within the month).

BORAH has been the great Lone Wolf of Washington and has built a national reputation unequalled by any man in Congress. Where he differs from Roosevelt is in wanting to smash monopoly and to return to unbridled competition. In business, hence to avoid governmental intervention.

Recent polls show Borah as one of the two most popular Republican candidates. He tends to use his strength to wrest control of the party from ex-President Hoover. He probably does not care, as a man of 70, to take on the burden of office himself.

The other outstanding candidate is Governor Alf Landon, of restoring full competition in business, and an advocate of economy and orthodoxy in national finance. He is vigorous, outspoken and upright.

So far he has been content to be one of the most intolerant of Roosevelt's critics. As a public speaker he is hard to the point of being metallic, and utterly without eloquence, a handicap not balanced by the impression he makes of being sincere and courageous.

THE leader of the Republican Party is still Mr. Hoover, and as the campaign draws near his shadow over his party mounts and darkens. His is a painful presence. Qualified by gifts and outlook to lead this year's fight, certainly more so than Knox or Landon, he still might be a fatal candidate.

In the popular mind the Great Depression bears his name. This may be an historic injustice, but it is a fact. It was the Hoover Depression. The old is to be entertaining, to put himself out to please women. He likes planning surprises, doing unexpected things on the spur of the moment.

One other candidate so far must be taken into account, Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan. In the space that stretches between the radicalism of Borah and the stark conservatism of Hoover, he occupies comfortable

Middle-Aged Englishmen

By Hilda Lurcott

WHY are our middle-aged Englishmen so dull in comparison with their Continental contemporaries? A Frenchman or an Italian of 45-50 is a charming, intriguing creature, enjoying life, ready for any adventure, an excellent companion, but the average Englishman of that age is a grim, obstinate being, whose life has become a routine of fixed habits which must never be broken.

He has his cold bath, his round of golf, his dinner at eight, and plays bridge with the same people with inflexible precision. He refuses to be jostled out of his moorings. He hates meeting new people, shuns new restaurants. Husbands are slightly worse than bachelors, but there is little in it. Having lived for some time on the Continent I sadly notice the difference. The middle-aged foreigner is a delightful man, whether single or married. He is spontaneous, accommodating, ready to participate in any amusement, full of ideas. He is an excellent dancer too, far better than most English husbands, "who can't be bothered to learn."

He is witty, full of vivacity, and has that happy knack of conveying those subtle little compliments and insinuations which are so pleasing to women. He has not grown too old to be entertaining, to put himself out to please women. He likes planning surprises, doing unexpected things on the spur of the moment. But the middle-aged Englishman is a staid and elderly gentleman, who hates picnics, moonlight drives, parties. He is courteous to women, but afraid of them; his motto is "Beware." He resigns himself to growing old in a nice, comfortable groove. He is unenterprising, unambitious. Why don't you brighten your selves up, you middle-aged English men?

Berlin, Feb. 6.

Apparently it was owing to the bad weather that the two planes, believed to be Heinkel military machines, collided. One crashed into the Kauflingerstrasse and the other into a

TRANSPORT EMBARGO HARD TO MANAGE

Committee of Eighteen Meeting in March

Geneva, Feb. 6.
The sub-committee on oil transport today completed its work. It is understood that its report shows serious practical difficulties in the way of an embargo on transport, notably in the matter of control.
The Committee of Experts is expected to finish its work next week, when its report will be sent to all Governments. These will be given about three weeks to consider the information, and the Committee of Eighteen will be convened early in March to take further action.—Reuter.

KHARTOUM DISASTER

London, Feb. 6.
A statement read in the House of Commons this afternoon with respect to the City of Khartoum disaster off Alexandria, in which twelve persons lost their lives and only the pilot of the Imperial Airways plane survived, said that the conclusion of the investigation of the disaster would be published in due course.
It was recalled that pilots were required to satisfy themselves before beginning a flight of the adequacy of their fuel and water supply. This was still a part of standing instructions in Imperial Airways.—Reuter.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

EXTENDING PLAN TO AID AGRICULTURISTS

London, Feb. 6.
In the House of Commons this afternoon, the Minister of Labour, Mr. Ernest Brown, proposed the second reading of the Government's Bill to extend unemployment insurance to agricultural workers.
The Bill affected about three quarters of a million men and women who would be brought into a separate unemployment insurance to a fund of their own, which would be financially self-contained.
The Bill, in the main, followed the recommendations of the Unemployment Insurance Statutory Committee, but the major difference was a rather higher rate of benefit, which was made possible by a slightly higher contribution than recommended in the report. They hoped that the payment of contributions would begin on May next and the payment of benefit as from November 5 following. The amount of the Exchequer contribution would be at an annual rate of £200,000.
The Minister claimed that the Bill would confer great advantages on the countryside and do much to check the flow of labour from country to towns.
Mr. Tom Williams, for the Labour Opposition, said they would not oppose the second reading, but reserved the right to criticise the measure in detail in committee.
The debate continues.—British Wireless.

INSURANCE LAW REFORM

BRITISH COMMITTEE APPOINTED

London, Feb. 6.
The Board of Trade has appointed a committee to consider whether any changes in the existing law relating to the carrying on of the business of insurance are desirable in the light of statutory provisions relating to compulsory insurance against third party risks, and by employers against liability to their workmen.
A Committee of fifteen members, including two past Presidents of Lloyd's, and other insurance experts and actuaries, will be presided over by Sir Felix Casagol, formerly Judge Advocate General to the Forces.—British Wireless.

BRITAIN BUYING ARMS ABROAD MANUFACTURERS IN CLEFT STICK

HOME PLANTS REMAIN IDLE; OTHERS THRIVE

London, Feb. 6.
The charge that the British Government was buying arms abroad, to the extent that the British small arms industry was at a standstill while foreign plants did a thriving business, was made today at the hearing before the Royal Commission investigating the arms manufacturing and export trade of the United Kingdom.

The heads of Imperial Chemical Industries, who have been giving evidence before the Royal Commission, were succeeded today by Major Clark, managing director of Hadfields, a big Sheffield engineering firm, who denied his firm had sold their armour piercing shells, or allowed other people to manufacture them on licence, to eight foreign countries.
Major Clark added there was no secrecy about the shell, as it was patented.

During earlier proceedings, when I.C.I. witnesses were giving testimony, experts refuted the general impression that mustard gas was easy to make. They said that if one had raw materials given one it would be an extraordinarily difficult job to make the gas. One expert said that even with his twenty years' experience his ability would be greatly taxed.

Sir Harry McGowan, chairman of the I.C.I., said his company would not be concerned about any private loss through the nationalisation of the arms industry but insisted that nationalisation would be a great loss to the country.
In answer to a Commissioner's query he said the I.C.I. did not make poison gas, and did not know of any other firm making it.

Another I.C.I. officer agreed that generally speaking it was necessary to have peace-time orders to enable any concern to be ready for the emergency of war-time.

LITTLE BUSINESS

The heads of other large engineering firms gave evidence. Where armaments plants existed they were very little used, they said.
Mr. G. D. B.A., said the small arms industry in England had been crippled through lack of government support. If that were not so there would be no necessity for the government to purchase foreign makers of small arms, as they were doing.
"Instead of factories like Hotchkiss, Bren and Colt being busy as they have been for a number of years, while the B.S.A. stood practically idle, our company would be working to capacity and in an emergency would be immediately able to switch entirely to home requirements," he declared.

NEVER AIDED REVOLTS

In 1930 the War Office concluded an agreement with the B.S.A. whereby, in consideration for its maintenance of a rifle manufacturing

COST OF NATIONALISATION

Washington, Feb. 6.
The Inter-State Commerce Commission has presented the Senate a bill with an estimate of the cost of reconditioning the Government's eight naval yards to permit the Government to build all the warships required. It would run into approximately $23,000,000.

As a yard stick figure, it is estimated that the Government could build seventeen warships yearly in these renovated yards, at an annual cost of about $150,000,000, and that at the end of twenty years such a programme would achieve the construction of twenty battleships, twenty aircraft carriers, twenty heavy and twenty light cruisers, 200 destroyers and 45 submarines.

Estimating the cost of plants to enable the Government to manufacture all its military arms, the Commission reports it would require $8,000,000 to duplicate Colt's machine-gun and small arms factory, $11,000,000 to duplicate the Pratt and Whitney and aeroplane factories, and $3,000,000 to duplicate the Dupont Carney's Point powder factory.—United Press.

OPPOSES INCREASE IN SILVER PRICE

Thomas Warns Against Upward Revaluation

Washington, Feb. 5.
The upward revaluation of silver as a compromise with Congressional inflationists, is opposed emphatically by Senator Thomas, who declares that such a move would prevent silver ever becoming money, owing to its widespread intrinsic value and the official price.

Some observers believe the stand taken by Senator Thomas places revaluation practically outside the realm of possibility.—Reuter.

War Board regarding the best locations for the proposed bases is at present on the desk of the Secretary for War, Mr. George Dern, and probably will never be made public because it delves deeply into the secrets of national defence.

Moreover, it will probably never be used, except as a guide, in connection with defence strategy.
Observers believe that the proposed chain of air bases exceeds the present defence requirements, and hence the expense is not warranted. High army officers are sharply divided on the merits of the plan and Air Corps leaders say that the expense of bases in the interior of the country, seaboard bases are preferred. Moreover, they believe it best to spend money on planes rather than bases.—United Press.

BRITISH AID FOR EGYPT

HARBOUR DREDGING AND RAILWAY

London, Feb. 6.
The Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, Lord Cranborne, was asked in the House of Commons today about proposals for the dredging of Alexandria Harbour and the construction of a railway from Fuka, and whether the Egyptian Government had requested financial assistance.

He replied that estimated expenditure for additional dredging of Alexandria Harbour was 20,000 Egyptian pounds, and His Majesty's Government had spontaneously offered to contribute a sum not exceeding 10,000 Egyptian pounds.

Estimated cost of the Fuka-Matruh Railway was 2,000 Egyptian pounds and the Government had offered towards that expenditure a sum not exceeding 20,000 pounds sterling. The Egyptian Government was contributing the remainder.

The British Government would not acquire any control over the harbour or railway line, Lord Cranborne said.—British Wireless.

BRITAIN'S CREDIT STRUCTURE

GOLD VALUE ISSUE RAISED

London, Feb. 6.
The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Neville Chamberlain, informed the House of Commons in answer to a question that the value at today's market price of gold, added to the reserve of the Bank of England in the last four years, would be about £131,000,000.
He added, in reference to the suggestion of a member, that it would be highly misleading to seek to relate the credit structure of the country to figures of the net imports of gold, as shown in the Customs returns, and put by his questioner at £14,000,000 in the last four years, as these do not necessarily represent a transfer of gold to or from British ownership.—British Wireless.

RELIEF ACTS REPEALED

Washington, Feb. 6.
In accordance with President Roosevelt's recommendation to Congress on Monday, Congress has passed a Bill which repeals the White House for relaxation of the Cotton Act, the Smith-Kort Tobacco Act, and the Potomac Act, which came under A.A.A. legislation.—Reuter.

ACCUSED MAN IN HOSPITAL

ALSO ALLEGED VICTIM OF ASSAULT

When a case in which Chau Lai-man, aged 20 years, unemployed, was charged on three counts of loitering, assault and possession of offensive weapons was mentioned before Mr. W. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy this morning, it was stated by Detective Sergeant Baldwin that both defendant and a private watchman he had assaulted were in hospital.
The watchman, Kan Wal, had been struck on the head with a hammer, and the defendant fell down some steps while running away and received internal injuries.
The charges against defendant were that he was found loitering at Taling Lin Terrace on February 4 at midnight; assaulting Kan Wal, a private watchman, and possession of a knife and a hammer for an unlawful purpose.
Mr. Schofield remanded defendant in police custody for three days.

Americans Coldly Received

AT OPENING OF THE WINTER OLYMPICS

Garmisch Partenkir, Feb. 6. Spectators at the opening of the Winter Olympic Games here to-day vigorously applauded the European and Oriental squads when they paraded before Herr Hitler and other notable Nazi leaders, while the Canadians were mildly cheered.

But for the American contingent the crowd sat in absolute silence, after which the Yankees proceeded to beat Germany by a goal to nil in the opening ice hockey match for the meeting.

Gordon Smith of Boston scored the lone goal in the first period, but both teams were ragged and there was no team work displayed.

Subsequently Canada beat Poland by eight goals to one while Hungary defeated Belgium by 11 goals to 2.

BRITAIN'S THREAT TO WITHDRAW

Provides Sensation At Olympiad

Garmisch Partenkir, Feb. 6. When Herr Hitler, surrounded by General Goebbels, Minister for Propaganda and other Nazi leaders opened the Winter Olympiad to-day bands played the "Heimweh" song and "Deutschland Über Alles" as the flag of each nation participating was lowered in salute.

Hitler responded with an upraised arm.

A sensation was provided by the British threat to withdraw their ice-hockey team in consequence of the suspension of two British-born Canadian members of the side by the International Ice Hockey Association.

BILLIARDS

EXCITING GAME

CHAMPIONSHIP UPSET

PEREIRA LOSES

A. P. Pereira, Jr., considered one of the leading competitors in the Colony senior billiards championship was eliminated from the competition last night when he lost an exciting second round match to Andrew Tse by 500 to 495.

The match was played at the K.C.C. before something like 100 spectators, who were thrilled by the closeness of the struggle. The contestants were never far away from each other and the winning points were obtained in an electrical atmosphere of silence.

Pereira recorded the best breaks of the evening, making 47 and 43, while Tse's highest was a 37. But Tse scored consistently and usually complied between 15 and 20 when he went to the table.

It was a splendid game and a fine achievement by the winner, who now meets Lam Cho-cha in the third round, the winner of which match qualifies for the semi-final.

STOKE CITY BEAT BIRMINGHAM

London, Feb. 6. Stoke City garnered first division points before their own spectators to-day when they beat Birmingham by three goals to one in a re-arranged match.—Reuter.

The Women's Section of the European Y.M.C.A. has arranged a Games Afternoon consisting of Bridge, and Mahjong to be held in the West Lounge on Monday, February 17, at 3 o'clock. Tickets, which are $1 and include tea are being sold on behalf of the Hockey Club funds.

REACH TENNIS FINAL FINE MATCH YESTERDAY DOUBLES TITLE QUEST

(By "Veritas").

If to-morrow Mrs. Wilson and Miss Rosamund Hancock, and Mrs. Kayll and Mrs. Dowling can reproduce the form which gave them such decisive semi-final successes, then I predict that this year's final of the ladies' doubles tennis championship is going to be one of the finest in the history of the competition.

Pitted yesterday against Mrs. Litton and Mrs. Andrews, two exponents of no mean ability, Mrs. Wilson and Miss Hancock rushed through to an impressive victory in something like 35 minutes by the scores of 6-2, 6-0.

This semi-final match was played at the U.S.R.C. and provided an entertaining match. The winners started off at whirlwind pace and succeeded in maintaining it until the end. Miss Hancock's chiselling drives were followed by Mrs. Wilson's incisive smashing. The opposition were tagged back to the baseline from the opening rally, and though they defended stoutly they had no adequate answer to the ever-increasing pressure applied by the winners.

NEARLY PEAK FORM

Mrs. Wilson touched very nearly peak form, producing a dazzling array of strokes which earned her chief individual honours of the match. Though she hit very hard and with a fine deep length from the baseline, the main charm and effect of her ground strokes were in the subtle variations of length and pace imparted to shots nearly all of them addressed in the same manner.

Several times she caught Mrs. Andrews unawares, notably off service. From the net Mrs. Wilson "killed" with evident relish and just as much skill. Now and again she failed to connect correctly, but in the course of the two sets it can be said her overhead work was par excellence.

Miss Hancock was a model of stability from the baseline and gave the opposition a few samples of her running forehand drive, which is just as effective as it is pleasing to the eye.

HARD DEFENSIVE GAME

The losers played a hard game, but being denied the opportunity of attacking they were constantly at a disadvantage. Mrs. Andrews, taking a very late ball—it seemed to me as a result of her grip which was decidedly "English"—drove powerfully but with a somewhat high trajectory which offered Mrs. Wilson many of her volleying opportunities. Of the two Mrs. Andrews was the steeper, particularly from the forecourt, where, when she did get the position, Mrs. Litton several times committed unexpected mistakes.

Mrs. Litton, on the rear court, and twice made astonishing recoveries from smashes which looked aces all the way. But she appeared to dominate her side of the court just a little too much; had a great deal of the ball and usually broke down in the long-thrashed rallies. Towards the end she switched over to that old troublesome stroke of hers—trying to chop in front of her ball which bounces no higher than the net. It let her down more than once.

Figures invariably are bugbears, and it is not advisable to judge the play in this match on the scores. There was a succession of fine rallies in the course of which all four players made shots of note. The losers would have captured several more games if they had boasted just the right finishing shots. They lost a lot on their own mistakes. Which does not mean the winners were not full value. They were, every bit of it. They played with better understanding and certainly had a greater variety of strokes.

Mrs. Kayll, one of the finalists, was watching the game, and I have no doubt she was suitably impressed. To-morrow's match should be worth going a long way to see.

TO-DAY'S TWO MATCHES

SEMI-FINALS OF THE CINGLES

This afternoon at the U.S.R.C., two tennis matches will be played to determine the finalists in this year's ladies' singles championship.

Mrs. Kayll (holder) and Mrs. Nora Wilson are favoured to emerge from

CRICKET NOTES

"Oh Dear! Oh Lord! I've Done It Again"

QUOTHS R. ABBIT, BUT OFFERS A SPIRITED DEFENCE

Oh dear, oh Lord! Oh Lord, oh dear, I've gone and done it again! Or at least so some people seem to think. As a matter of fact I did not see either the K. C. C. and I. R. C. match nor the Varsity-Craigengower one. I think I said so. Perhaps I forgot it. My account of the I. R. C. match was given me by a player who has represented the Colony more than once in Inter-port Cricket (and that leaves a bit of room for guessing!), my comments were my own.

The general charges seem a bit vague by the way and anyway I do not write my own headlines—but I don't quite get the bit about the finish of the game. I think that the feat of holding up the ninth wicket for three quarters of an hour was an excellent one, especially in view of the fact that the light was reported to me as appalling. (By the way, another person present said that play could have been continued for another five minutes. So what is one to believe and even if one sees one's self—other views dimly remember to be held by others!)

As for my remark that "somehow or other it was done" that was a reminiscence of Spofforth's remarks when the Australians went out to field in that last innings when they won the match at the Oval to secure for the first time the mythical Ashes—"this thing can be done." It was done and history was made. And yet I gather I am supposed to have belittled the feat of the later I.R.C. batsmen!

I think the fact is that the gentlemen who signed the letter—which I take off my hat to them—have not quite realized that there may be no most divergent views held by two or more eye-witnesses of any given incident, and further that no single person can witness more than one match in its entire length, or bits of two or more games. The best that can be done is to collate reports obtained from eye-witnesses who are competent to make such reports.

The person who gave me the report of the K.C.C. game was one of the batsmen, and with the approval of most cricketers as a capable observer. I am sorry my two critics don't like his views, they may however prefer the following report from another experienced cricketer which I print in its entirety, not to be able to do all the matches personally but it is a physical impossibility, and one can only do a match full justice when one has seen every ball of it, as I try to do in the Triangular Tournament and Inter-ports.

"I.R.C. won the toss and put K.C.C. in. E. C. Fincher and A. Lay out on fifty-two for the first wicket. Fincher was a nice four off Mimi. Wicket was easy paced and good and only one or two balls out during the afternoon. Fincher was severe on Mimi with nice cover drives and pulls to leg. Teddy Fincher laid the foundation for a good score and scored 40 runs off 40 balls. Mimi was a bit better than boundary shots. Mackay hit well with a nice straight drive against Pereira. Fincher and Mimi went for quick runs. K.C.C. declared leaving same time via 2 hours to I.R.C. to get the runs. Goodwin had a good first spell of bowling and got two quick wickets. R. Lee who opened with him was not doing anything off the bat.

The test. The former meets her old opponent, Miss Rosamund Hancock, who will probably give a better account of herself than she did in the semi-final last year. Miss Hancock has clearly improved her game in all directions and can now take the forecourt with some confidence. The game promises some sparkling exchanges.

In the other match Mrs. Wilson meets Mrs. Dowling, hitherto a comparative "dark horse". But Mrs. Dowling's success against Mrs. Litton, and her clever play in the ladies' doubles championship which has helped to put her and Mrs. Kayll in the final, has clearly indicated that Mrs. Wilson is up against a tough proposition.

Mrs. Wilson may be able to rattle her opponent out of a normal game if she can successfully raid the net. In an exchange of ground strokes there would seem to be little to choose between the two.

BIG SPORTS PROGRAMME FOR THE "KARLSRUHE"

Football, Tennis, And Athletics

The delightfully varied and comprehensive programme arranged for the officers and crew of the German 6,000 ton cruiser "Karlsruhe" during their visit to Hong Kong, provides several sporting engagements.

This afternoon the football team will turn out for practice preparatory to meeting a team from H.M.S. Dorsetshire to-morrow. The meeting will be played at the football field of English and German Navy teams is of more than passing interest. To-morrow also tennis will be played while the Hongkong Yacht Club is entertaining a party from the ship and will engage them in a cruiser race on Saturday and Sunday.

A rifle shooting match is scheduled for Monday at Stonecutters and on Saturday week another football match will be played, this time against Canton Germans. On the same day there will be athletic sports, and a football match against combined Hongkong and Canton Germans.

At the same time Chinese Recreation Club were lifting themselves to the top of the league in consequence of an overwhelming win against St. Andrew's "B" whom they defeated 8-1.

They assume this leadership for the first time this season and the accomplishment marks the consistent advance made by the team during the past two months. Although without the services of Gordon Lum, S. W. Liang, and H. T. Woo the Chinese were much superior to the Saints of whom only Bliss and Weill offered any real resistance.

C.R.C. v. St. Andrew's "B" At Causeway Bay last night, the Chinese Recreation Club beat the St. Andrew's "B" team by 8 sets to 1.

C. Y. Yung and S. F. Chan (C.R.C.) beat A. S. Bliss and M. Weill 21-8; beat T. White and S. A. Broadbridge 21-5; beat L. Kirby and Mackay 21-0.

T. F. Lo and W. M. Cheung (C.R.C.) lost to Bliss and Weill 14-21; beat White and Broadbridge 21-8; beat Kirby and Mackay 21-0.

W. C. Choy and H. W. Ho (C.R.C.) beat Bliss and Weill 21-1; beat White and Broadbridge 21-1; beat Kirby and Mackay 21-0.

SMARTER RUNNING BY DERBY GRIFFINS

NOTABLE PERFORMANCE BY ROYAL SCOT

SEVERAL TRAINING TIMES SHOW BIG IMPROVEMENT

(By "Captain Foster")

I said in my last notes that I was very disappointed with the slow cantering adopted at the Chinese New Year's holiday, but believe me, there were several fast gallops during the week-end and they were certainly a treat to watch, especially the performance of Royal Scot owned by Messrs. Bradbury and Harriman. Her achievement over the mile last Sunday was the best ever galloped by a Derby Griffin during the early mornings, and her finish was, without any fear of contradiction, not "all out." It must have been a source of satisfaction to her connections when this lovely grey mare gave a true display of her energy and speed, and no doubt Mr. Harriman, who was "at the wheel", was quite satisfied with the running of the mile in a wonderful time of 2.06.1/5.

I watched the mare very carefully and the manner in which she obeyed the jockey, was very impressive. It would give a false colouring should I attempt to suggest that Royal Scot is now a "dead cat" for the Blue Riband, but I have no hesitation in saying that it must be a first class animal to deprive her of first place in the Hongkong Derby to be run at the Happy Valley on February 23, and I sincerely hope that I shall not be in the wrong box.

Royal Scot (Mr. Harriman) and Royal Consort (Russian riding boy) were given a fast tryout over a mile and the circuit was covered in 2.06.1/5, romping home inside 31 seconds. When entering the straight for the home run, it could be seen that Royal Consort was labouring, and about 100 yards from the finishing line, Mr. Harriman called upon Royal Scot for a final spurt. The mare not only responded gamely but left her stable companion almost standing.

This was the second best gallop performed by Royal Scot, the first being on Thursday, January 16, when she covered the Champions course (1 1/4 Miles) in 2.49.4/5. In commenting on the said times, I said in my notes of January 25, that the mare was not "all out" and it is interesting to recall that her last mile was done inside two minutes eleven seconds. My actual words in connection with this gallop were "believe it or not, she was not extended" and her starting mark was not "all out" and it was again successful in the following year.

It will be recalled that O-Moon was the only Sub-Griffin to annex three Garrison Cups—and it was on account of this pony that "winner of Garrison Cup at any time is now barred" for the Royal Navy Cup. This restriction came into force since 1930 and it is amusing to relate that Blaire has three Navy Cups to his credit, as soon as he wins the Garrison Cup, he is ineligible for the "Jack Tar" Cup and it has been whispered that his chances are very rosy for the "Tommy Atkins" Cup.

GALLOPING DATES CHANGED

The galloping days of various stables have been changed from Wednesdays and Saturdays to Thursdays and Sundays respectively, and this had to be altered, owing to the annual day of the Carnival being held on Saturday. Mr. Encarnacion would have put his legs over Rosemary, but owing to the late arrival of Empress of Russia on Sunday morning, the mare was taken out to ride the "riding boy" over the Derby distance, and she took 3.44.4/5, to travel the journey. There was nothing to write home about the whole time, but the last mile inside two minutes twelve seconds showed that the animal had four useful legs. She finished the gallop like a steam-roller. It may not be known that Rosemary was absent from the course about 10 days owing to an accident just before the Chinese New Year and under the circumstances she is short of a few gallops.

In the same morning all the "View" ponies were tested over one and a half miles' gallop, the best being done by Forest View who took 3.24.2/5 to journey the tour. She finished very badly and her last half mile was covered in 1.13 flat. It was not known that her first mile of the circuit was performed in 2.11.2/5, and I am inclined to believe that (if Forest View is the best of Mr. Lan's string) she is more a sprinter than a stayer.

DUNBAR ASPIRANTS

Mr. and Mrs. Dunbar's aspirants had a go over 3 1/4 miles last Saturday and although Bear Claw's time was better than Thunder Bay by 3.4/5 seconds, I am of the opinion that the latter is a better pony, Bear Claw (Mr. Frost) and Bontal Bay, a

C. H. Soon and S. C. Pye (Eliot Hall "B") beat Xavier and Barros, 21-17; beat Remedios and Basto, 21-18; beat Gosano and Beltrino, 21-10.

At the Eliot Hall last night, the "View" ponies were tested over one and a half miles' gallop, the best being done by Forest View who took 3.24.2/5 to journey the tour. She finished very badly and her last half mile was covered in 1.13 flat. It was not known that her first mile of the circuit was performed in 2.11.2/5, and I am inclined to believe that (if Forest View is the best of Mr. Lan's string) she is more a sprinter than a stayer.

By virtue of only one win during 1935, the following ponies, Blaire, Copper, Idol, Kingston and Young Chap will have to carry 8 lbs. penalty in the Garrison Cup, whereas Belmont Star and Wadebridge have incurred 7 lbs. extra. Iron Grey with Mr. Needa won the Garrison Cup last year and this pony, after an outing in the Double South Meeting last October, was on the sick list for a

MR. L. DUNBAR'S QUEST

(By "Captain Foster")

We will not see much of our second class raters in action on the first day of the Carnival, but the Curragh Stakes over a mile (which is a new event in which A and B class ponies are barred) will certainly draw a big field on the second day and we should see a good race between High Speed, Jungle Jim, Monoplane, Soldier of China and Soldier of Peace. The training times of these ponies have not appeared in the newspapers but all are in good condition.

The Chatter Cup, presented by the late Sir Paul Chatter over a course of 1 1/4 miles, has drawn 16 good entries "B" Class, China Ponies, and the lowest weight in this race is 105 lbs. to be carried by Helman, King's Bounty, Pride of Taingao and The Tiger. By virtue of having won three races during 1935, King's Jubilee, Mistake Bay, and Pontine Bay will have to weigh out at 171 lbs, and this means 3 lbs. more than the top weight allowed to be allotted in the handicaps events. It is too early yet to discuss the prospects, but, surely, Helman, Ribble and Sacko (if in condition) should have some say in the places. This Cup is worth winning.

The next event, which is the tenth on the card of the second day is the

AUSTRALIAN SUB GRIFFINS

PONIES ON THE UP-GRADE

(By "Captain Foster")

Messrs. Hall and Shenton's The Dunlin (Black-O Fox (Mr. Butler) has a try-out last Sunday over the Derby course and they took 3.13.1/5 to cover the circuit, finishing the last quarter in 28 seconds. This gallop was held in the presence of the owners and I am sure that they must have left the course quite satisfied.

It was undoubtedly the best of this year's aspirants and The Dunlin, finished gamely. It is interesting to note that his last one and a quarter miles were timed in 2.38.1/5, practically the same as performed by A Grand Time, on January 4. I hear that Mr. D. S. Li will be riding the latter pony.

Strathroy was full of running last Saturday when he, in company with Ranger, galloped a mile in 2.02.4/5, and came home inside 28 seconds. Strathroy has never raced here before and it is hard to say whether he is a sprinter or stayer. This pony is improving daily.

Violet Queen is in better mood now than what she was about a month ago. She had the habit of running, especially round the bend for the home run, but lately she has behaved much better and it seems that this young lady will not give any trouble to Mr. Y. T. Fung at the Meeting. Violet Queen is the only black animal among this year's Sub-Griffin and if she makes her mind to run, this mare is worth $5 each way.

INTERPORT HOCKEY

Hongkong-Macao Fixture
To Be Rearranged

The recently arranged annual interport hockey match between Hongkong and Macao, which was postponed on account of the death of His late Majesty King George V, is to be fixed by the Council of the Hongkong Hockey Association at a meeting called for Thursday next at St. Andrew's Church Hall.

The meeting is timed to commence at 5.30 p.m. and other items on the agenda include the election of representatives for the International tournament.

TO-DAY'S MATCH

The Club de Recreo and the Hongkong Hockey Club seconds are due to meet at King's Park this afternoon, the games commencing at 5 p.m. The following are the teams:

Hongkong Hockey Club seconds: Van der Waal; R. H. D. Lane and L. F. Nicholson; A. Kate, E. G. Dale and A. N. Other; A. N. Other, L. D. Kilbee, N. A. E. Mackay, A. A. R. Botelho and A. J. Bennett.

Club de Recreo: N. Farin; A. A. Remedios and A. J. Baeto; E. A. R. Alves (capt.), J. B. Goncalves and A. M. Alves; J. J. Figueiredo, A. R. de Figueira, A. M. Xavier, A. S. Xavier and P. M. P. Rosario.

SPORTS OUTLOOK FOR 1936

ENGLAND'S INTEREST IN ATHLETICS
CRICKET AND TENNIS

(By Percy Rudd)

In these dark and dismal days it is a pleasant occupation to run a speculative eye over the sporting panorama of 1936. In the picture are such things as cricket Tests against India, played—let us hope—under a summer sun; Wimbledon's big parade of lawn tennis skill and beauty and fashion; the glories of racing at Epsom, Ascot, Goodwood, and the thrills of the eleventh Olympic Games, with more sunshine accompaniment, on the outskirts of Berlin.

Before these happen of course, we shall have scenes in a more wintry setting—the excitement of international football and of F.A. Cup, the clash of big boxers, the Grand National Steeplechase, the University Boat Race.

But with fog in the throat and frost in the bones, my body yearns for midsummer heat, so let us take what comfort we can by starting in the middle of the reel.

It is not merely right but excellent that we should do so, for the Olympic Games only come to us once in four years.

I have no patience with the people who decry this vividly picturesque meeting of the world's best athletes—a meeting which has no counterpart in sporting endeavour or in spectator interest.

The contrast between the way in which they are now conducted and the Games held in London in 1908 is in their real justification.

REAL SPORTSMANSHIP

I remember my distinguished namesake, B. G. D. Rudd, Oxford Blue and South African Olympic champion, telling me of an experience of his in the Antwerp Games of 1920.

He was leading at a bend of the track in one of his races when an American competitor, coming up on the outside, jostled him and knocked him out of his stride and on to the grass. Immediately the offender said "Sorry, Rudd" and dropped back, allowing him to resume his place.

That is the spirit which animates all the competitors nowadays, and the Germans, with their genius for organisation, may be relied upon to provide the perfect setting in 1936.

Great Britain should enter into these Games full of confidence in her athletes. I do not remember a year when we had such a splendid collection of middle-distance runners.

There is no reason, indeed, why we should not win the Olympic events at 400, 800 and 1,500 metres, and I would not be greatly surprised if we counted the Dominions as a part—were to provide the first three in the longest of these races, which is the equivalent of the English mile.

We have good sprinters and hurdlers, too, but in the field events, I am afraid, we have no chance of any success. Where is that Englishman never excel at jumping and throwing? I do not know, but even here we are improving.

It is comforting, for instance to think that we have a pole vaulter who can clear 12ft. 6in., a shot-putter who can achieve about 45ft., and a young javelin-thrower who has already beaten 100ft.

ELASTIC CRICKET OUTLOOK

Cricket is more elastic in its outlook on such things as qualification rules than any other sport, and no one will regret that the best cricketer in India, the Nawab of Patnauli, who has played for England, is permitted to return to this country as the captain of the touring side.

We ought, I suppose, to beat this Indian team, but the stock of English cricket has never stood so low. South Africa and the West Indies, as well as Australia, have conquered us in recent Test matches, so it may now be India's turn.

Our game is suffering from a real lack of outstanding personalities, and I do not envy the selectors who at the end of the season will choose our team for the winter's tour of Australia. Where the bowlers are to come from is not at the moment apparent, but perhaps the need will supply the men.

I wonder what is going to happen to the experimental l.b.w. law when this tour takes place? By that time, of course, it may be embodied in the rules of the game, in which case the Australians might find themselves in a position of some difficulty.

In spite of the fact that many of their best cricketers are in favour of the new rule, the controlling council refused to play under it in South Africa this winter, presumably on the ground that the Africans had had a season's experience of the rule in England.

Well, they could have afforded to concede their opponents that handicap and they would then have been cleared for a new law which nearly everyone agrees is bound to come. It is extraordinary how the

Why Ernest
Tyldesley Is Not CaptainLANCASHIRE PREFER A YOUNGER MAN

Why was Ernest Tyldesley, the veteran cricket professional of Lancashire, not appointed to the county captaincy after he had been invited by some members of the committee to allow his name to stand?

Remembering Lord Hawke's famous exclamation, "Pray God no professional may ever captain England," I asked leaders of the game in Lancashire to-day whether such a question of principle had caused them to offer the captaincy to the young amateur, W. H. Lister, who has played for the county frequently since he came down from Cambridge writes a Special Correspondent.

Mr. T. A. Higson, chairman of the committee, would not admit that the decision had any such basis. "I can only refer you to the announcement that Mr. Lister has been chosen," he said.

TYLDESLEY NEARLY 47

Sir Edwin Stockton, former president of the club, said:

"We on the committee have the highest admiration for Tyldesley as player and man. But he is nearly 47 and cannot in the natural order of things go on playing much longer."

"That being so we took the long view and decided that it was better to appoint a young amateur. Lister is 24, a charming fellow, and a good and plucky player. I remember how he played a wonderful innings against Larwood at his best."

The intention of Tyldesley was that if he were invited to become captain he would play as an amateur, as did Jack Sharp in similar circumstances some years ago. Tyldesley has not signed a contract for next season, and Sir Edwin Stockton, after the committee meeting, sent him a telegram urging him to offer his services if required as an amateur.

"You have done big things in the past," says the telegram, "this action would be the biggest."

CONGRATULATIONS TO LISTER

Tyldesley has taken the decision of the committee like a good sportsman. When he heard the news he sent a telegram of congratulation to Lister in London.

Tyldesley has emphasised that he never sought the captaincy, although he consented to allow himself to be proposed. He is in no way grieved at the decision not to appoint him.

What about lawn tennis? Shall we keep the Davis Cup and the Wimbledon crown? The answer hangs on the fitness or otherwise of Fred Perry. Kay Stammers or Dorothy Round (who was suffering from too much tennis last summer) might very well win the women's singles championship, in spite of the two Helens from America, and we really ought to regain the Wightman Cup in the coming year.

AND GOLF?

Shall we keep the Open Golf Championship? Why not? We have more brilliant young stroke players than we ever had and we have lost that inferiority complex. But the Amateur Championship is, I am afraid, another story.

As to the big events of the late winter, I must leave the football season to look after itself, with the perhaps dangerous prophecies that Sunderland will win the League championship and Wales the International Rugby honours.

There remains the Boat Race. Well, when Oxford can produce 26 eights enthusiastic enough to row 17 miles in order to see the race between their university's Trial Eight—as Cambridge did—they may have a chance of once again beating the Light Blues from Putney to Mortlake. But not until.

Sides Chosen For Week-End

The R.A.M.C. cricketers will be playing two Junior League matches over the week-end. To-morrow they meet the Civil Service C.C. at Happy Valley, while on Sunday the Indian R.C. will provide the opposition.

The following have been selected to represent the R.A.M.C. for to-morrow's match on the Civil Service C.C. ground:

Sgt. Lewis (Capt.), Sgt. Castall, Cpl. Howell, A/C. Apps, L/C. Snook, Pte. Flint, Pte. Foster, Pte. Glendenning, Pte. Saunders, Pte. Thompson and Pte. Westwood.

Umpire: S/S. Goddard; Scorer: Pte. Lloyd.

For Sunday's match against the Indian R.C. on the Indians' ground, the R.A.M.C. will be represented by the following:

Captain Trimble (Capt.), Sgt. Lewis, Sgt. Castall, Cpl. Howell, A/C. Apps, L/C. Snook, Pte. Flint, Pte. Foster, Pte. Saunders, Pte. Thompson and Pte. Westwood.

Twelfth man, Pte. Glendenning. Umpire: S/S. Goddard; Scorer: Pte. Lloyd.

The Tell-Tale Tongue!

The condition of your stomach and intestinal tract is reflected in the state of your tongue. It should be red and clean, which indicates internal cleanliness; a furred or yellow tongue reveals the need for Pinkettes, the dainty little gentle-as-a-nature laxative.

A dose of Pinkettes, taken when needed, dispels constipation and liverishness, corrects biliousness, aids digestion, stimulates appetite.

If you are feeling off-colour, head-achy, liverish, depressed, try a dose of Pinkettes to-night, and see how more clear-headed, lively and generally 'fit' you will feel to-morrow. Or chemists everywhere.

MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY

CHAPTER ONE

In the luxury of his ancestral home in London, young Roger Byam looked forward to the voyage of H.M.S. Bounty with a light heart. "Why, Mother," he insisted, "this is England's best venture in science, in trade, in discovery."

"But, two years—two long years, Roger."

"Short years for me, Mother. Adventure, romance, all the wonderful—"

"Young man," Sir Joseph Banks interrupted, "the work is too much for one purpose—to make me a dictionary of the Tahitian language. I've made that clear to Captain Bligh."

"What's he like, sir?"

"Captain Bligh? He's a sea-going diabolist. Begotten in a galley, and born under a gun. His hair is rope-yarn, his teeth are marline-splikes!"

"Sounds rather terrifying," Mrs. Byam suggested. "But, perhaps, as your father used to say, a taut hand at sea is better than a slack one."

"Two days later, Roger Byam bid farewell to his mother on the docks at Portsmouth and jumped into the wherry that was to take him out to the Bounty.

On board the Bounty, a few minutes later, Midshipman Byam suffered a cruel shattering of a treasured illusion. Roger Byam about him was a confusion that did not fit into his conception of the meticulous neatness of His Majesty's Navy. Drunken sailors lay in the scuppers. Dishonoured girls screamed with coarse, gay laughter.

Roger looked up at the bronzed face of the man who addressed him. "Yes, sir."

"I'm Fletcher Christian, acting lieutenant and master's mate." He offered his hand. "Come along! I'll show you below."

"Son Captain Bligh came aboard with Sir Joseph Banks, and Roger was presented to the captain. With Sir Joseph present, Bligh was affable enough with his young charge. Maggs, the captain's clerk, interrupted them to present a letter to Bligh. The captain read the letter.

"A flogging through the fleet," he said, as he turned to his clerk. "Mr. Christian!" he called. "Pipe the ship's company to witness punishment at seven bells!"

Bligh turned to Sir Joseph. "Would you like to see a flogging, Sir Joseph?"

"Good heavens, no! Anyway, I must be off. Good luck to you, Mr. Bligh!"

"Thank you, Sir Joseph. Good-bye!"

"Good-bye, Roger. It won't be all cakes and ale. But, your family has followed the sea for seven generations. Not one has ever failed his duty. In tight places, that's all you have to remember."

"I'll try, sir!"

"I know you will, my lad! Good-bye!"

As Sir Joseph went over the side to board a waiting wherry, Roger turned to Captain Bligh. "A flogging through the fleet—what does that mean, sir?"

"That means, sir," Bligh answered gruffly. "Two dozen lashes at each ship!"

"The man struck his captain! Remember this! A seaman's a seaman! A captain's a captain! And, Sir Joseph or no Sir Joseph, a midshipman is the lowest form of animal life in His Majesty's Navy!"

At seven bells, the entire company of the Bounty was assembled on deck. For many minutes, they stood there in silence, knowing, if not seeing, the drama of relentless, inhuman naval discipline that was being enacted near-by. Only the incessant beat of a drum, pounding over the calm waters of Portsmouth Harbour.

Then, the sound of the drum grew steadily louder, and some surging impulse made the men of the Bounty look down over the side towards the procession of longboats that was coming towards them. The lead boat, manned by marines, was rowed slowly by six powerful oarsmen in time to the nervous beat of the drum. A surgeon and a master-at-arms, heads bowed, stood beside the drummer. Huddled below them, lay a seaman. Stripped to his waist, his hands bound together, he lay quite still. His bronzed back was torn and bleeding; the planking of the boat was black with blood.

"Off hats!" Christian commanded, and the officers and crew of the Bounty obeyed.

Captain Bligh, a stern symbol of relentless authority at sea, read slowly, and with evident relief, from the Naval Articles of War: "If any officer, mariner, soldier, or other person of the fleet shall strike or offer to strike, any of his superior officers, and being convicted of such offence, he shall suffer such punishment as shall be inflicted upon him by the sentence of a court-martial."

"On hats!"

"Mr. Morrison!" Bligh ordered, "do your duty!"

Morrison, a cat-o'-nine-tails in his hands, went over the side slowly. In the longboat below, the surgeon was kneeling at the side of the convict. Suddenly, he stood up and faced Captain Bligh.

"The man is dead, sir!"

"Dead?" The captain, unmoved, turned to Morrison. "Master-at-arms, how many are due?"

"Two dozen, sir!" Morrison's voice was quivering.

"Mr. Morrison!" the captain said. "Two dozen, I believe!"

Fletcher Christian stared at Bligh in amazement. Roger Byam clenched his fists until the nails bit into the flesh, and he turned his eyes towards the deck. Blind-fury leaped into the eyes of the men of the Bounty, but no man dared to move.

The drum rolled. The cat-o'-nine-tails cut into the dry back of the convict. The merciless drum rolled out a second beat, and men died a thousand deaths as Morrison responded.

Long, awful, sickening minutes followed.

Then, Morrison's voice came up from the longboat. "Punishment ended out, sir," he said.

"Come aboard!" Bligh turned to an officer at his side. "Mr. Fryer, make ready to sail!"

"Larboard watch, secure for sea!" Fryer shouted. "Starboard watch, shorten in the cable!"

After a feverish hour of activity to give the Bounty the full advantage of a fresh wind and a swiftly running tide, the ship put out to sea. Steady to her course, the Captain summoned the crew to deck. They stood with heads bared as he read perfunctorily and with little show of reverence the formal naval "prayer to be used at sea."

"Amen!" the crew echoed him.

"The ship's company," Bligh went on gruffly, "will bear in mind that we are at sea under the Articles of War. The flogging you witnessed at Portsmouth was an example of their authority. I am under the impression, from what I heard at the time, that you don't like flogging."

He chose three men, apparently at random. "You—you—step forward! It was too much for your stomachs, I suppose. Well, I'll ease them a bit—five days on half rations! Dismissed!"

Many months of Captain Bligh's brutal discipline followed. Christian, a hard man, but a fair one, tried to ease the plight of his men, but he was thwarted at every turn by the captain and those few other officers who sought his favour.

Men plodded through their duties sullenly, quietly. But, behind their grim silence, welled a great smouldering fire of long pent passion. Christian knew that only a spark was needed to bring forth the all-consuming flames of mutiny. Then, late in the fourth month, it burst out like the raging fury of a Vesuvius.

All hands stood on deck. Maggs, chief clerk to Captain Bligh, read from the Naval Articles of War.

"Mr. Christian!"

Fletcher Christian stepped forward.

"Mr. Christian," Bligh demanded, "now, will you sign this book?"

"Captain Bligh, the ship's company will bear witness that I sign these accounts now in obedience to your orders. But, I insist, sir, that the accounts are false. I shall ask for a Court of Inquiry in England!"

"You mutinous dog!"

"You will retract that, sir!" Christian's voice was steady.

"I will repeat it!" Then, slowly, deliberately, Captain Bligh repeated the insult. "You mutinous dog!"

Christian's face closed. Four paces separated him from his captain. He walked slowly forward. The men, beaten, broken men, fired suddenly with new life, new hope, surged forward behind him.

"Land ho!" cried the lookout from aloft. For far in the distance, he saw, looming out of the still sea, the dim dark outline of that paradise of the South Seas, Tahiti.

(Tahiti, beautiful, languorous, island of romance, beckons with its waving, inviting palm trees to the broken, beaten, love-starved sailors of H. M. S. Bounty. What does this island paradise hold in store for them?)

CINEMA NEWS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

As the sweetheart of the South—the darling of the North—Shirley Temple is starred in her first big dramatic role in "The Little Rebel," the 20th Century Fox picture coming on Saturday to the King's and Alhambra Theatres. Adapted from the ever-popular play of the same name, "The Little Rebel" presents John Boles, Jack Holt, Karen Morley and Bill Robinson. Shirley's old tap-dancing friend, in the supporting cast of the picture. The locale of the picture is old Virginia at the height of the Civil War, with Shirley and her parents loyal supporters of the losing Confederacy. Much of the pathos and tenderness of the picture centres about Shirley and her mother, Karen Morley, who finally succumbs to the hardship of the war. There are adventures in her scrapes with the Yankees, and a thrilling flight as Shirley's father, John Boles, attempts to smuggle her through the Yankee lines, only to be captured and held as a spy. The closing sequences are devoted to showing how this dimpled darling manages to win President Lincoln to her cause and save her father and the Yankee officer who befriended them. That lovely song, "If All Thy Endearing Young Charms," is sung by Shirley and John Boles in the picture. Another song, "Polly Wolly Doodle," was especially composed for the little star by B. G. DeSylva, associate producer of the picture, and Sidney Clare. Direction of the Darryl F. Zanuck picture was done by David Butler, who formerly directed "Bright Eyes." Prominent in the supporting cast are Gail Williams, Willie Best and Frank McElmryn, Sr., who plays the role of Lincoln.

"Peter Ibbetson"

All the delicacy, beauty and poignancy of George du Maurier's immortal love story lives again in Paramount's picturization of "Peter Ibbetson," starring Gary Cooper in the title role, next change at the Queen's Theatre. A gigantic tank at best, in filming the strangest of strange novels, all concerned in the production of this fascinating fantasy, deserve high praise for maintaining the dignity and ethereal atmosphere which characterized Du Maurier's classic, as well as giving it added robustness and warm blooded appeal in its latest screen regalia. Although old-fashioned romance and sentiment run riot in the film, its tenderness and beauty in treatment is skillfully avoided by that astute director, Henry Hathaway, who gave us the highly successful "Bengal Lancer."

It is interesting to watch Gary Cooper's interpretation of Ibbetson. Cast in a role entirely foreign to any he has attempted, Cooper achieves a memorable characterization, revealing hitherto hidden versatility in his make-up just as he displayed amazing undiscovered capabilities in the "Bengal Lancer."

Ann Harding, who appears opposite Cooper, as the Duchess of Towers, also can be accorded highest commendation for her portrayal. Miss Harding brings a warmth of understanding to the tragic, yet pathetic Duchess, doomed to lifelong separation from her lover. Laid against the picturesque colourful background in the Victorian period, "Peter Ibbetson" depicts the beautiful love between a man and woman, a love so great that it surmounted every obstacle, even those of life and death. "Peter Ibbetson" can definitely be classed as an innovation in picture-making. Hereto produced as a play and an opera, "Ibbetson" as a photo-play, gains much in scope, with the decided advantage that the screen can give it a dream fantasy in the strictest sense of word, the finest photography creates the necessary dream-like illusion, without at the same time detracting from an impression of solidly and down-to-earth atmosphere that gives it its feeling of reality.

"Annapolis Farewell"

All the colour, spirit, courage, patriotism, traditional ideals and historical beauty for which the United States Naval Academy stands, is reproduced in "Annapolis Farewell," Paramount's authentic film document of a midshipman's life in this famous school, which is at the Star Theatre to-day. The rigorous daily schedule, the arrival of plebes, the whipping them into shape, the efficient discipline, the midshipman's mess, at work, at study, at play, at drill, at gun practice, on dress parade, the gradual training and molding into clean American manhood of the boys who enter Annapolis as sacred portals all constitute a stirring, picturesque and important background to the main theme of this impressively realistic photoplay. Sir Guy Standing, in the role of retired naval officer who lives in the memories of his days at Annapolis. Day when he fought under Dewey, gives one of the most superb portrayals of the year, and the most important in his career. Richard Cromwell and Tom Brown, cast as room mates and rivals in the picture, are excellent in their parts. Howland Smith, as the romantic interest in the film, rival in the boy's affections, is just the kind of girl a young middle would be expected to have. John Howard deserves mention also. Benny Baker, Louise Beavers are responsible for many amusing sequences. Alexander Hall did a splendid job in his direction, with the full co-operation of officers and students of the academy.

"It's In The Air"

Who wouldn't like to be a leading man on the screen and make love to the glamorous beauties? Harvey Stephens wouldn't like the honour; he wants no part of it. The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer player, who portrays the villain in Jack Benny's starring comedy-drama, "It's In The Air," now showing at the King's Theatre, adds that it would be pleasant, but he wants to be the "bad man" of the screen. He has a reason to think that villainous screen deeds are a help to him. He won a long-term contract for being the bad man in "Evelyn Prentice." In "After Office Hours" he even knocked Clark Gable down for the sake of screen realism. In "Baby Face Harrington" he tried to steal Una Merkel from her husband, and in his current picture, "It's In The Air," he tries to steal Miss Merkel from her screen husband, portrayed by Benny. Harvey. Stephens is a villain with a difference. He supplies a convincing masterpiece with charm, a lowdown growl with winning ways, a loutish manner with surrings that no nice girl should trust. He is the bad man par excellence. His only explanation for wanting to play such roles is: "If like parts I can get my teeth into. The others aren't any fun." "It's In The Air," directed by Charles Reisner, shows the radio, stage and screen comedian, Benny, in a role of a Broadway "chiseller" who becomes a national hero instead (Continued on Page 11.)

POSED AS POLICE CONSTABLE

MAN ARRESTED FOR IMPERSONATION

Posing as a police constable proved the downfall of Cheng Yung-ang, unemployed, aged 20 years, who appeared before Mr. W. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy this morning, on a charge of impersonation in Queen's Road West, on February 5.

Detective Sergeant Baldwin said defendant saw a man pawing some articles of clothing and went up to him and asked him to whom the clothing belonged. The man replied it was his, but defendant asked him to come along with him for enquiries. As they got outside the pawnshop, defendant saw a district watchman and called out to him by the number of 17, but the district watchman's number was 107. The watchman came up to them, and defendant said he had a case for him. He was asked what authority he had for arresting the man, and replied he was a constable and had gone on duty at noon. He also stated that he was P.C.C. 104.

The district watchman became suspicious, and asked defendant for proof of his identity. Defendant then produced a whistle, a whistle chain and a cap, bearing the number 604. Noting the difference between the numbers, the constable took defendant to the Police Station, where he admitted he was not a constable in Hongkong, but used to be a constable in Canton. P.C.C. 604 was seen and said he had not lost his whistle, chain or cap.

Defendant admitted the charge, saying he did not know it was against the regulations in Hongkong. He had been a constable in Canton. He could not explain his intention in arresting the man, but stated that he knew a detective named Ma Chat and was taking the man to him.

Mr. Schofield remanded defendant for 24 hours for enquiries.

OTTO MEETS VON STARHEMBERG

UNCONFIRMED REPORT FROM PARIS

Paris, Feb. 6.

The movements of Archduke Otto, who arrived in Paris yesterday, are watched with interest, as it is understood that he had a conversation with Prince von Starhemberg, the Austrian Vice-Chancellor. This, however, is not confirmed.

Although Prince von Starhemberg has assured M. Pierre Flandin, French Foreign Minister, that Austria will not restore the monarchy before consulting members of the Little Entente, he added that Austria will reserve her entire freedom in internal affairs regarding the form of her Government.—Reuter's Bulletin Service.

SOUND FINANCE IN NEW ZEALAND

Wellington, Feb. 6.

A statement by the Minister of Finance for the last nine months of 1935 showed that income from taxation increased by £135,000, and that the expenditure was well within the amount provided in last year's Budget.

The statement adds that New Zealand expects to have a balanced Budget in the coming fiscal year.—Reuter's Bulletin Service.

FIXED TRUSTS

London, Feb. 6.

The President of the Board of Trade, Mr. Runciman, announced in the Commons in reply to a question, that he had under active consideration the report of the Committee of the Stock Exchange recommending legislation to provide for the regulation of "Fixed Trusts," and he hoped to be able to make a statement shortly.—British Wireless.

Fung Chuen, unemployed, a time-expired banished with several previous convictions, was sentenced to five months' hard labour by Mr. S. Balfour at the Central Police Court this morning for stealing 45 cents from Chan Sze, fook of a rice shop at 124 Connaught Road West. The defendant was arrested by a district watchman in Hollywood Road near Queen's College where he was seen to put his hand into the complainant's pocket and extract the money. Sub-Inspector L. Mait, prosecuted.

Captain Siemens, commander of the German cruiser Karlsruhe.

No New Taxes Required

ENCOURAGING NEWS FOR AMERICANS

Washington, Feb. 6.

A hope for the formulation of a Tax Bill which will surprise the country by not being so large as was expected, was expressed by House of Representatives' leaders after a conference with President Roosevelt.

Mr. Doughton, Chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, declared that no new taxes to meet the veterans' bonus are indicated at present.—Reuter.

SEEKING SUGAR CONTROL

BRITISH DELEGATES IN HOLLAND

London, Feb. 6.

In connexion with the desire of the British Government to promote an international agreement on the subject of sugar, Sir Henry Fountain, of the Board of Trade, and Mr. S. Caine visited The Hague and Tuesday and yesterday held conversations with officials of the Dutch Government with the object of exploring the possibilities of achieving such an agreement.

Detailed examination was given to various difficult questions which have to be considered before any international conference on the subject can usefully be convened. Results of the discussions will be reported to the two governments.—British Wireless.

CORONERS' DUTIES

REFORMS ADVISED IN BRITAIN

London, Feb. 7.

Sweeping reforms in inquest procedure are recommended in the report of a Departmental Committee on coroners and their responsibilities.

It is proposed that a coroner should no longer be empowered to commit a person to trial on a charge of murder, manslaughter or infanticide, and that verdict of "suicide while of unsound mind" felix de de should be abolished and the verdict "died of his own hand" substituted.

The press, it is proposed, should be prohibited from publishing the account of an inquest on a suicide, apart from the normal findings.—Reuter.

CAVELL SENTENCE ECHO

COMPANION PASSES AWAY

Leung Chan, 32, unemployed, was sentenced to six weeks' hard labour by Mr. Macfadyen at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning for stealing a radiator cap belonging to Chan Kam-hon, general manager of an ink manufacturing firm. Defendant, it was disclosed, was arrested about 7 a.m. yesterday with the radiator cap in his possession. He was questioned and admitted having stolen it from private car No. 2228 outside No. 2 Pau Cheong Street yesterday.

CLEVER PIECE OF HOUSEBREAKING

MEMBER OF GANG SENTENCED

A heavy door fitted with a Yale lock did not deter Leung Hon-wah, unemployed, from forcing open the door and entering No. 10 Yik Yam Street, third floor, and stealing a gramophone, a book of records, an electric fan, a fox fur and a clock, property of Tso Tak-wan, a nurse at the Yeung Wo Hospital, on the night of January 31.

Acting Inspector Carey said defendant had done the job very cleverly. He had forced the door apart with a jemmy and had sprung the lock. No damage had been done to the lock at all, except by the marks of the jemmy on the door, and after it had been closed it was difficult to tell that it had been forced open.

The theft was committed in the daytime. Defendant was arrested on information at No. 12 Star Street, where the fan was found. The other articles were recovered from pawnshops.

The defendant, said Inspector Carey, appeared to be a member of a particularly clever gang. There were two other men known to the police in connection with this case, but they had not been arrested.

Mr. Schofield imposed sentence of six months' hard labour on defendant, who admitted a previous conviction for housebreaking.

"CHEATING THE PARSON"

CHURCH TITHE WAR FLARES AGAIN

London, Feb. 7.

England's bitterest internal feud flared again to-day when 200 farmers gathered and threatened to march to London to the old harvest tune of "Cheating the Parson" to protest against payment of tithes to the Church of England.

The newest outbreak of a revolt, which dates from 1786, is a result of allegations that an investigation Commission revealed its findings to the Archbishop of Canterbury but refused to inform the farmers of intended future action.—United Press.

MARGIN RULES TOO COMPLEX

U.S. OFFICIALS SEE NEED OF CHANGE

Washington, Feb. 6.

It is reported that officials of the Federal Reserve Board feel that the present margin regulations are complex and expensive, and that a satisfactory safeguard against "pyramiding" could be obtained by a simpler system of flat percentage which may possibly be adopted later.

"Pyramiding" means the utilizing of increased buying power, owing to a rise in market prices.—Reuter.

TRADE WITH ARGENTINE

London, Feb. 6.

Asked in the Commons at question-time whether it was proposed to give notice of termination of the trade agreement with the Argentine Republic on or before May of this year, the President of the Board of Trade, Mr. Runciman, said the future of this agreement was receiving the consideration of the Government.—British Wireless.

A three-year-old robbery was recalled at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning when Chan Ming-cheong, alias Chan Yiu-wai, alias Chan Wai, aged 31, was brought before Mr. Macfadyen, charged with having assaulted Mori Sugi on July 26, 1932, at No. 808 Nathan Road, second floor, with intent to rob her of her goods and chattels. On the application of Detective-Sergeant MacPherson, defendant was remanded for twenty-four hours.
